Large blocks of calciferous sandstone rubble on projecting plinth stones; graduated sandstone slate roof, flat lead roofs on towers, ashlar chimney stacks. 3-storey, 4-bay, C14 former tower house (now gabled) with flanking 4 storey, single-bay late C15 or early C16 towers; early C16 curtain wall enclosing courtyard to rear, C16 hall and barrack block in L-shape within courtyard. Central block has C20 door in chamfered surround with C20 pointed arch. Ground floor 2-light chamfered mullioned windows with hood moulds are C19 replacements. 2 original C16 3-light chamfered mullioned windows above; a third similar window to right is C19. 2 small square attic windows flank 2 two-light mullioned windows of 1922. Rear wall has blocked courtyard entrance; small chamfered-surround windows on various levels, some with iron grilles. Interior has C15 roof timbers. tower to right has C19 ground floor window, smaller original windows above. Top courses of stonework project irregularly and may be rebuilt. Projecting battlemented parapet to both towers. tower to left is set back with garderobe in the angle. corbelled out firebreast at first floor level. Parapet has early C16 stone inscribed T D (Thomas Dacre). Interior has garderobe on each level; windows between the adjoining hall and tower suggest hall is of a later date; floor levels altered in 1922. Curtain wall forms outer wall of adjoining hall and barrack block. Hall has ground floor stone-mullioned windows of 1922; upper floor chamfered surround windows are probably C16. End wall has 3 light window with tre-foil heads. Slit vents to left light garderobes. Interior has fireplace with inscription Thomas Carleton Junior 1576 (land sergeant); blocked door and stairs in thickness of end wall suggest a third tower and parapet walk around curtain wall; C16 roof timbers, tie-beams, kingposts with two-way braces and queenstruts. Barrack block has small C16 chamfered surround windows on various levels, some with iron grilles and slit vents for garderobes. Wall to courtyard has 1922 windows, converted from later use as stables. Interior has 2 C16 fireplaces between modern floor levels. Curtain wall continues to enclose courtyard and has C19 rebuilt segmental arch. Blocked C16 window to left, suggests a porter's lodge with slight remains of steps to parapet walk. Building Description

Summary of Building

Church, 1885, architect unknown. Gothic Arts and Crafts.

Reasons for Designation

The Church of St Kentigern of 1884 is listed at Grade II for the following principal reasons: * Design interest: a simple plan, well composed to form a distinctive composition incorporating Arts and Crafts Movement elements; * Quality of craftsmanship: well-detailed elevations inside and outside, making use of good quality materials; * Degree of survival: a largely intact building, the only losses being the wooden benches and floor; * Fittings: although always simply furnished, the interior has original fittings including the timber screen, the font and painted stained glass to the apse windows; * Group value: the church benefits from a spatial and historic group value with the adjacent Grade II listed C18 arch, rebuilt with stone from the original medieval church.

Formerly 2 storeys, probably 3 bays. Only north-east wall remains with early C19 additions to left and right, under common roof, with rebuilt south-west wall; lean-to farm buildings now cover part of north and all of south wall. One chamfered surround small window, beside C19 entrance, with holes for cross bars now removed, is the only original opening visible. Original entrances to ground and upper floor were probably in southwest wall; no internal remains of stone vaulting. Other filled entrance to right is probably C18, with wooden lintel. In the Gilsland survey of 1603, this is referred to as 'a faire stone house'. See RCHM, shielings & Bastles, 1970, p.76.

Building Description

Castle and seat of the Earls of Carlisle. Probably late C13, first mentioned in 1323 (V.C.H. Cumberland p.255), licence to crenellate 1335, granted to Ranulph de Dacre; additions C1520, for and by Thomas Lord Dacre; further additions 1602 (date & initials W.H. on rainwater head), for Lord William Howard; Vanburgh designed music gallery and screen for 3rd Earl and may have been responsible for work on the kitchen offices; Colvin mentions work by C.H. Tatham for the 5th Earl; Salvin restored the north and east ranges after the fire of 1844. Calciferous and red dressed sandstone, lead and slate roofs, stone chimney stacks. Formerly: tower house (Dacre Tower) with south curtain wall; hall and chapel ranges with north-east angle gate tower (Lord William Howards Tower) all altered C1520 and 1602; Morpeth Tower added to hall, 1845; C18 & C19 west and south range with Stanley Tower of 1881. East range living quarters of 2 storeys, 9 bays, has flanking 3 storey, one bay towers, with battlemented parapets to each. Small square headed mullioned windows with square leaded panes: large and small round headed mullioned windows to courtyard, have diamond leaded panes. South curtain wall has large C16 pointed arch, with recessed chamfered surround and large iron studded gates, giving access to large open courtyard; arms of William Howard above. North range has external but engaged, Morpeth Tower of 2 storeys, 2 bays: hall of 2 storeys, 9 bays, has raised courtyard entrance, with carved stone panel of Dacre arms above. Square 2-light and round headed 3-light mullioned windows have diamond leaded panes. Battlemented parapet and 1982 slate roof, replacing 1845 lead (grant aided by historic Buildings Council). West range, 3 storeys, 6 bays, is of similar details, formerly kitchens and servants quarters, now let as flats. Interior has wood panelled library and other panelled rooms by C.J. Ferguson, with painted gesso overmantel panel of The Battle of Flodden by Burne-Jones and sir E. Boehm, 1882. Hall gutted by fire, 1844, but retains large C16 fireplace with segmental head: wooden hammer beam roof by Salvin 1845. Lord William Howard's Tower is supported on ribbed arches crossing the angle of the north-east walls. Lord William's chamber has timbered ceiling, C1350, from Kirkoswald Castle, with moulded beams and bosses and panels filled with flowing tracery. The oratory contains part of a screen from Lanercost Priory with crocketed ogee panels and a German painting dated 1514, representing the Flagellation, crucifixion and resurrection. Dacre Tower has ground floor iron yett. See, Transactions, Cumberland and Westmorland Antiquarian & Archaeological Society, old series, iv, p.486-509; Country Life, 25 March 1911, p. 414-22.

Listing Title: SCARROW HILL, BRAMPTON

Statutory Reference: 1408870 Grade: II Delisted Date:

Location Address

Scarrow Hill, Brampton, CA8 2QZ

Building Description

House, constructed in 1601; converted to mid C18 coaching inn, and later divided into a pair of cottages, now returned to a single dwelling.

Materials: neatly squared and coursed grey carboniferous sandstone (re-used from Hadrian's Wall) laid in regular straight courses; walls are on average 0.62m thick. Red sandstone window surrounds, slate roof covering and industrial brick chimneystacks.

Plan: two-unit ground floor with inserted stair to first floor, and rear outshuts; originally, a possible blacksmiths forge to the ground floor west, with living accommodation above and probably alongside. Exterior: main (north) elevation: two storey and four bays under a steeply pitched roof, with end gable stacks; the building has flush quoins and there are traces of a boulder plinth.

Attached single storey porches, with shallow pitched roofs. The building has semi-symmetrical fenestration of C18 character, off-set to the left, to accommodate the presence of an original large hearth on the west gable. Many of the windows appear to have been fitted into existing openings. The two ground floor end window openings have finely cut surrounds and are fitted with replacement six-over-six sash windows. Two smaller, inserted windows sit between; that to the left is inserted into a blocked former entrance, and that to the right is believed to replace a smaller opening. The first floor has a central two-light mullioned window, flanked to either side by plain window openings similar to those of the ground floor end windows, also with replacement frames.

Rear (south) elevation: rear outshut with three inserted windows and a doorway, with a modern conservatory at the west end. Attached porches have shoulder-arched entrances. The verges of the gable ends show evidence of former skew stones indicating the presence of a former thatched roof.

Interior: to the ground floor, there are two mid C18 red sandstone fireplaces with pyramidal stops, and three ceiling beams, which run from front to back, only one of which is visible, the two others boxed in. The remainder of the ground and first floor is largely later C20 in date. The original oak roof structure remains and comprises three intermediate principal rafter with tie beam-and-collar trusses; the collars of each truss are slightly cambered and each carries double, backed purlins to each pitch. The structure is of good quality with mortice and tenon joints and almost square joints; single wooden pegs are used throughout. The trusses have assembly marks in the form of single, double or triple crescent or half moons, a form that is considered uncommon in Northern England. The oak beams are understood to be formed between six and nine individual trees that have been halved with a fine-bladed saw and have had their rounded, outer faces trimmed and roughly squared with an adze or axe. The roof structure contains a number of Apotropaic marks, otherwise known as Witch marks; motifs include 'egg timers' and 'daisy wheel'.

Such marks were considered to protect a building from evil spirits, witches or their animal familiars. Within the roof space, now partially occupied by an inserted brick flue, is an original recessed slot some four feet wide and 14 inches deep which marks the position of the original early C17 flue and former smoke hood.

Listing Title: CHURCH OF ST MICHEAL

Statutory Reference: 128-1/13/00045 Grade: I Delisted Date:

Location Address

Church of St Michael, Burgh-by-Sands, Cumbria

Building Description

Church. Probably late C12, bell tower 1360, C15 east tower, alterations of 1713 and restoration 1881. Squared and coursed red and calciferous sandstone (from the nearby Roman Wall and Roman fort, on which site the church stands); graduated greenslate roof, C20 brick chimney stack in vestry. 3-storey west tower; 3-bay nave with north aisle, 20bay chancel and single bay vestry (former east tower) under common roof. West tower has extremely thick walls in chamfered plinth with clasping buttresses; vaulted lower chamber has newel staircase in south-west angle, lit by arrow slits; west wall has internal steps in thickness of wall, to arrow slit; loop hole former north entrance in aisle. South-east buttress has inscription I.S 1560(?). First floor trefoil-headed lancets in each wall, that in east all looks into nave; round arched bell openings above, square-headed in east wall. Battlemented parapet with projecting lead water spouts. O.S bench mark on north-west buttress. East entrance from nave has iron yet and drawbar tunnel. Medieval bells. Repositioned Norman north entrance to aisle, has beakhead decoration; Victorian restoration of outer order. Inscriptions on jambs: I.B 1769, I.B 1842. when the bell tower was built, it appears this entrance was blocked and a shouldered-arched entrance opened in the west wall of aisle, itself now blocked. Pointed lancet windows of 1881. South wall of nave has 3 blocked square-headed windows, replaced with C19 2-light windows with pale tracery; large C18 aedicule monument between windows has very weathered inscription. Chancel has pointed lancets of 1881 and probable lepers' window, although this appears to be in a blocked priest's entrance. Vestry was formerly the vicar's tower, reduced in height and gabled over, probably in 1713; remains of a blocked C15 window; round headed C18 windows, upper floor C19 sash window with glazing bars in east end. Interior: 3-bay north aisle arcade of pointed arches on octagonal columns with stiff-leaf capitals (columns collapsed when tower was built in 1360 and had to be rebuilt). Open timber roof to nave of 1881. C19 stained glass. C19 chancel arch, aumbry recess; east sanctuary wall has entrance to vestry right and sculptured corbel stone from Roman Fort to left. Early C20 furnishings and fittings. C18 font on C19 shaft. One of a small number of fortified churches in the border area, unique in having 2 fortified towers. See unpublished notes by B.C. Jones, Burgh by Sands, History of church, 1978, Cumbria County Record Office.

Listing Title: Barn to west of Stonehouse

Statutory Reference: 128-0/5/10005 Grade: II Delisted Date:

Location Address

Stone House, Moorhouse, Carlisle, CA5 6HA

Building Description

Farm outbuilding, combining the functions of barn and cowhouse. C18, with C19 alterations. Clay walling, with pebble facings to street elevation, render and brick to side and rear elevations, all raised upon a massive boulder foundation. Welsh slated roof, replacing a stone slate covering surviving vestigially at the eaves of a rear offshut. Single storey with overlofts, with lean-to rear offshuts to each end. Street elevation; quoined corners and cobbled facings, incorporating 3 evenly spaced doors with stone surrounds, all now blocked with brick infill and three pane hopper lights. Rear elevation with off-centre full height threshing doorway, single taking-in door to left and single doorway further left. Each offshut with central doorway.

Interior

Flagged threshing floor, and mass clay construction expressed internally. Simple tie beam trusses support simple purlin. Listed for group value with the stonehouse to the east with which it strongly associated visually, and of special interest as a example of a type of mass clay wall construction unique to the Solway Plain.

Statutory Reference: 128-1/ 5/10006 Grade: II Delisted Date:

Location Address

Leigh Cottage, Burgh by Sands, Carlisle, CA5 6BD

Building Description

Small house. Mid C17 or earlier with C18 alterations and C19 extension. Clay walling, now with C20 sculptured cement render. Turf and straw-thatched roof concealed beneath C20 corrugated sheet covering. Main range of two bays; single storey with attic and with lower single bay addition at east end with offshut to north, which conceals the original gable entrance. Front wall with two windows, one small paned, the other a late C19 four pane sash. Inserted doorway to east end. Rear elevation with off-centre doorway with painted surround and plank door. Small fire window to left of doorway. Brick extension to north gable, with stone slated roof.

Interior

Hearth with C18 surround, the hearth lintol supported on corbelled jambs. Feet of cruck blades emerge from side walls 1 metre below ceiling level. Two-cell plan form little disturbed, with plain ladder stair to attic. An important example of clay construction on The Solway Plain, where building in clay remained a significant building tradition into the C19. This simple vernacular building is also notable for the survival of a little altered interior, including its central cruck truss.

Building Description

Church Hall, formerly west range of cloisters of Lanercost Priory. Early C13 with alterations of 1559 for Sir Thomas Dacre, further early C19 alterations. Mixed red and calciferous squared and coursed sandstone rubble (mostly from the nearby Roman Wall); graduated green slate roof, stone chimney stack. 2 storeys, 5 bays; long range with upper floor C16 dining hall. Scriptorium left has slype entrance under to cloisters, tall lancet window, dentilled cornice and gabled roof. Interior has moulded C16 plaster frieze of mermaids and scallop shells, which is the same as a frieze in the Vicar's tower. Central lower floor is very much altered; 2 two-light stone mullioned windows and C20 garage entrance to right. Extreme right undercroft has early C13 stone rib-vaulting. Upper floor entrance with segmental arch has been blocked, mid C16 chamfered-surround flat-arched entrance to right; C19 external stone steps. Upper floor 3 & 4 light stone mullioned windows with C19 restoration. Extreme right mid C16 2-bay projection has 3-light stone mullioned windows, with continuous hood mould. Interior of dining hall: kingpost timber roof of 5 bays; traces of mid C16 mural of heraldic device with vine leaf decorative borders. C16 moulded stone fireplace in thickness of west wall has been partly removed and originally had carved oak chimney piece of 1618 for Henry Dacre, now in Bowes Museum; blocked spice cupboard to right. Moulded stone fireplace in thickness of east wall is dated 1586 with initials of Christopher Dacre. Behind the present stage is the remains of the timber frame for the mid C16 minstrels' gallery. At the Dissolution, the Prior's tower, Dacre Hall and Outer Court were purchased by Sir Thomas Dacre; his alterations to form his house, are dated by the remains of a stained glass window from the hall, now in the nearby parish church. Remained in that family until the early C18. John Hetherington was of Dacre Hall, when he died in 1745. Purchased by the Earl of Carlisle in C19, converted to church hall in C20. Building Description

Barn, formerly west range of the house of Sir Thomas Dacre built on the site of the Outer Court of Lanercost Priory. Mid C16; with C19 additions. Mixed calciferous and red sandstone rubble partly from the demolished Priory (originally stone from the Roman Wall); graduated red sandstone slate roof with coped gables; stone end chimney stack. Long barn of 2 storeys. Rear wall, facing Vicarage gardens, has central 2 bays with blocked ground floor window and blocked 2-light chamfered stone-mullioned windows above. Flanking walls are probably a C19 addition. Wall to farmyard appears to be completely C19 of older stone. Ground floor and loft plank doors, C19 chamfered-surround windows and large C20 sliding door. Listed partly for G.V with the adjoining Vicarage.

Building Description

Summary of Building

Farmhouse of clay-walled construction, probably later C17 or early C18 with subsequent alterations.
Reasons for Designation

This clay-walled building of probably late-C17 or early C18 date is designated at Grade II for the following principal reasons: * Date: while its constructional date can not be absolutely confirmed, the evidence provided by the building itself and our knowledge of such buildings on the Solway Plain, all point strongly to a likely origin in the later C17 or early C18; * Constructional materials: it is a good example of the formerly more widespread northern English clay building tradition which is now largely confined to the Solway Plain; * Plan form: it is an evolved building which retains significant evidence of its evolved long house derivative plan and its evolution to a two-cell plan; * Evolution: it is considered that significant early fabric survives in the form of clay mass walling and a re-modelled timber roof structure; alterations such as the insertion of a first floor are evident and add to the overall interest of the building's evolution.

History

Sparrow Rigg Cottage is considered to have been constructed as a single-storey farmhouse; while its exact date of origin is unknown, comparison with dated examples in the region suggest it is of late-C17 or early C18 date; evidence of original cruck construction and a long-house plan combined with our broader study and knowledge of Solway Plain clay buildings supports this assessment. The house is depicted on the 1:2500 OS map published in 1866 as 'Sparrowrigg' by which time it has acquired a rear outshut and has an L-shaped plan. The footprint of the building remains unchanged on the 1:2500 Ordnance Survey map published in 1900, with the exception of a small external rectangular feature attached to the north west gable. An Inland Revenue survey (and plan) undertaken between 1910 and 1915 describes Sparrowrigg as 25 acres and one rood of grazing land worth £28. The house is described as being of clay construction with a slate roof and to have three bedrooms, two sitting rooms, a kitchen, dairy and back kitchen. The small external building attached to the north west gable is described as a lean-to earth closet.

It is unclear whether the clay walls were raised in height at an unrecorded time but more recently the eaves have been raised and the roof set at a slightly shallower pitch. C20 and C21 alterations have included the insertion of dormer windows to part of the attic floor and the demolition of the small lean-to attached to the north west gable and its replacement with a modern, flat-roofed extension. The latter has been recently demolished as has the outshut formerly attached to the south wall. Internally, most modern fixtures and fittings have been removed.

The Solway Plain in northern Cumbria contains the only substantial surviving remnant of a clay building tradition that was once common throughout northern England and southern Scotland. Also known as clay 'dabbins', these buildings (about 300 examples) form a distinctive type of vernacular architecture first explored through the research of R W Brunskill and subsequently extensively studied by Nina Jennings and the Solway Plain dendrochronology project. Both domestic and farm buildings are represented, with clay mass walling consisting of thin layers of clay separated by thin beds of straw. The earliest examples have roofs which are largely independent of the walls and are formed of crucks set on a low stone plinth prior to construction. By the late-C18 the cruck frame was replaced with simple tie-beam trusses. Roofs were originally thatched. Most surviving clay-walled farmhouses are considered to date from the late-C17 or early C18 and are of long house derivative plan, in which people and animals lived under a common roof; the living areas are usually a two or three bay element comprising a firehouse and a parlour. Many buildings have been scientifically dated to earlier periods, however, and their evolution may be quite complex.

Details

Farmhouse, probably later C17 or early C18 with subsequent alterations.

Materials: the original farmhouse is of clay wall construction with an external cement render, set upon a stone and cobble plinth with red sandstone dressings (painted blue). Plan: long-house derivative with an off-centre non-axial chimney.

Exterior: the building is oriented roughly west to east and occupies a site that slopes gently down from south to north. It has one and a half storeys under a pitched roof and has the truncated remains of an off-centre non-axial ridge chimney.

The main (north) elevation is significantly bowed at its north west end. The ground floor has four rectangular window openings of varying sizes, although the tops of all four are set at roughly the same level, all with projecting stone sills and timber lintels. From left to right these comprise a small window fitted with a four-pane fixed frame with fine glazing bars, a larger window fitted with a four-pane unhorned sash frame, a small fire-window fitted with a four-pane fixed frame and at the far right a window fitted with a fixed six-pane frame. It is possible that a blind section of wall between the fire window and the fourth window contains the blocked north end of a former cross passage whose south end is visible in the south elevation as a blocked and rendered entrance. There are two small first-floor windows tucked beneath the eaves at the west and east ends, both with stone cills and a six-light unhorned sash frame and a four-pane fixed window respectively.

The rear (south) elevation has a single window at the north west end with red sandstone jambs and cill, fitted with a modern window frame; the short length of wall containing this window is thinner than the rest of the building and it is thought that this section has probably been rebuilt in stone or brick. To the right and with its right side in line with the off-centre truncated chimney is a former external entrance, possibly the south end of a former cross passage, now blocked and rendered. There are two modern, full roof dormers at the east end.

The removal of a later extension to the west gable has revealed some of the clay walling to both the original building and its upper extension and also suggests the presence of stone quoins to the main elevation. The chimney stack has been rebuilt.

Interior: the ground floor is divided into two rooms of unequal size by a firewall. The western room has a chimney breast to the west gable fitted with a later C20 fireplace. There is a hatch in the roof through which the attic floor above this room is accessed and through which unsawn and roughly hewn ridge and side purlins are visible. The space was not inspected but we understand that spalling of the render in places has revealed stone and cobble. The eastern room has a former inglenook against the firewall, now infilled with a modern red-brick fireplace, and lit by a small fire window to the right. Three substantial and roughly hewn beams run from front to rear embedded within the original clay walls at either end, which support later joists for the half-floor above. A full-height former door way with dressed stone jambs through the rear wall of this room gave access to the former rear outshut and is now blocked with breeze blocks; to either side where the render has spalled, the clay walling is visible. The east end of this room has been lightly partitioned and has an inserted stair to the first floor. To the right of the stair at first floor level a boxed in feature might represent the truncated remains of a cruck pair. The first floor consists of two bedrooms and retains what are interpreted as the roughly hewn ridge and side purlins of the original roof structure. At least one of these purlins displays a pegged scarf joint and an assembly mark. The ceilings are coved, masking further evidence of the roof structure.

OUTER BAILEY: DE IREBYS TOWER, Carlisle CASTLE, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Gate tower and curtain walls, with interval towers. C12 walls, partly rebuilt at various periods; C13 tower forms the core of present 1378-83 tower by John Lewyn; C19 alterations and C20 restorations. Squared blocks of red and calciferous sandstone with battered and brad pilasters; tower has flat lead roof. Outer bailey is roughly rectangular and its enclosing walls are a continuation of the inner bailey walls on the north and south side; west walls complete the circuit. The south wall has an off-centre gate tower (the main entrance to the castle). 3 storeys in rough L-shape; central through-archway retains portcullis and iron-studded wooden door; various sash windows most in enlarged openings, Over the arch is a blank panel (originally with coat of arms) set into the barbican which was crenellated in 1819. Extensively restored 1988-9 with some external stone replaced (stone replaced in 1874 has weathered in). INTERIOR not inspected. At the south-west angle was a battery, and a similar battery was at the north-west angle set on an existing tower. Halfway along the west wall is the postern gate, guarded by a projecting rectangular tower. The north walls have collapsed and been rebuilt on a number of occasions but some medieval walling remains. Continuous parapet walk around the walls has been cut away in places, probably in 1819 or 1832. for full details see McCarthy et al (1990). The castle is a Scheduled Ancient Monument. BRIDGE OVER OUTER MOAT, Carlisle Castle, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Drawbridge, converted to overbridge. Part medieval with late C18 additions and C20 part-rebuilding of parapet. Large blocks of squared red sandstone. At the base of the bridge are the drawbridge abutments; heightened between 1778-1791 and brick arch added. West solid parapet has coping inscribed by various C19 soldiers who served in the garrison; the right parapet has been rebuilt using new coping. the roadway is of Whin sets and a central sandstone pedestrian walk, all reset in the late 1980s. For full details see McCarthy et al (1990). A watercolour of Carlisle Castle by Robert Carlyle shows the arched bridge in 1791 (not on Hearne's engraving of 1778). NORTH CITY WALLS, Carlisle Castle, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Fragment of north city walls. C12 with extensive repairs of different periods up to 1973. Squared blocks of red sandstone with some calciferous sandstone and some re-used Roman Stone; partly on chamfered plinth with partly flagged parapet walk and rounded coping. High thick wall zig-zagged down slope, partly stepped. where the wall turns up at a sharp angle there is a C12 sallyport with rounded arch, blocked in similar materials to the wall at an early date. Further down the wall is a projecting oriel C15 or C16 canted turret, now supported by C19 buttress. Towards the demolished end of the wall it has been reduced in height and some stone replaced in 1973 to fill previous gap. At the rear of the wall, part of the parapet walk over the Castle moat has been cut away (probably in 1819) ; in other places the paving has gone from the walk. Wall was used as a retaining wall for gardens on Finkle Street and build-up of soil caused large crack still evident; soil removed in 1972. Remainder of north walls demolished between 1811 and 1815. Remains standing over 2 metres high survive beneath street level of West Tower Street (excavated 1973). For full details see McCarthy et al (1990). Scheduled Ancient Monument. WEST CITY WALLS/TILE TOWER, Carlisle Castle, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

City walls and interval tower. C12 walls extensively repaired up to C20; C12 tower rebuilt c1483 for the Duke of Gloucester (Richard III) with C19 and C20 repairs. Walls of mixed red and calciferous sandstone blocks (some stone re-used Roman) on chamferd plinth, with external buttresses repaired in C15 tile bricks. Internal face of C19 brick. Tower has plinth of same materials as walls but rebuilt on C15 tile brick. Flat flagged roof. High wall with projecting 2-storey square tower; parapet walk carried up by steps over tower. The wall is straight and joins the south west angle of the outer bailey of Carlisle Castle. upper parts of the wall clearly show the different repairs. The inside of the wall had its facing stones removed in 1745 and this was replaced in brick on the 1830s. the tower has slit vents in each face, the right return has a red sandstone panel, now weathered, originally thought to have had the emblem of a white boar (Richard's coat of arms). Rear of tower flush with wall has two C15 elliptical-arched doorways. C19 stone surround openings. INTERIOR: has steps to tower and upper chambers; brick vaulted ground floor, mural chambers and repaired C15 fireplaces.

Outer Bailey: Half Moon Battery, Carlisle Castle, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Battery and walls built as an outwork for the Captains Tower (qv); bridge replacing drawbridge. 1542 for Henry VIII by Stephen von Haschenperg; stone bridge added in late C18. Irregularly-coursed red and yellow squared sandstone. Single storey in half-moon shape, built into the inner moat so that its roof is now at ground level. Square splayed gun ports at regular intervals around the sides. Metal safety railings around steps at either side of the cobbled roof, (former gun platform) give access to inner half-moon passage. Flanking wall of similar material acts as retaining wall for the inner moat. At the southern end of this wall and crossing the moat is a single-span segmental-arched bridge; the parapet is of 1919. When no longer required, the moat was completely filled in 1827 and the upper parapet, on the battery and walls, was removed in 1833, so that there was nothing of these fortifications seen above ground until excavated 1917-19 (not to full and original depth). CAPTAINS TOWER/INNER BAILEY WALL, Castle Way, Carlisle

Building Description

Gate tower and curtain walls. C12 walls, C13 tower with C14 modifications and some C19 alterations; walls partly rebuilt 1821-4 and 1834-5. Squared blocks of red and calciferous sandstone; walls battered, partly buttressed and partly with broad pilasters; tower with buttress, pilaster and flat lead roof. The inner bailey is roughly triangular comprising north, south and west walls. The west walls face into the outer bailey and have a central 3-storey square tower (an earlier blocked gateway can also be seen in this wall). At the front of the tower the portcullis slot and platform above have been cut away (c1919), exposing a pointed archway under 1819 blocked doorway and windows. Crenellation was also removed in 1819. The rear of the arch has blind C14 tracery under a Tudor mullioned window. INTERIOR not inspected. North wall is extensively buttressed (these partly collapsed in 1821 and had to be rebuilt). On the angle of the south and north walls was Queen Mary's Tower which had to be demolished in 1834-5 and rebuilt in 1835 with a plain crenellated wall. south walls are earth embankments to take guns and abroad stepped ramp gives access to the west wall; beneath the northern part of the west wall are arched casements. The north parapet wall retains two C18 24-pounder cannons. For full details see McCarthy et al (1990). The Castle is a Scheduled Ancient Monument. Inner Bailey: Keep, Carlisle Castle, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Keep of Carlisle Castle and adjoining forebuilding. Early C12 with mid C16 and C19 alterations. Extremely thick walls of squared red sandstone with stepped chamfered plinth, broad pilasters and splayed embrasures to parapets. Flat lead roof. 4 storeys, roughly square. East face has off-centre doorway recessed for portcullis. An additional entrance at first floor level at left has been covered by a 2-storey forebuilding, which is partly medieval, but very altered (a 1577 replica panel is built into one wall). Various original slit windows, but some enlarged as casements or sashes with glazing bars; over one window is the inscription JOHN HYDE 1714. Sloping gun ramp on north face is now stepped; earthen ramparts cover parts of the west and south faces. Broad splayed embrasures to parapets are thought to be a C16 alteration, removing part of its original height. INTERIOR retains many original and later features; vaulted basement; C12 fireplace; mural chambers with C15 carvings. For full details McCarthy et al (1990). Listing includes the former 1827 Quartermaster's store adjoining the Forebuilding and remaining rear wall of the 1577 Governor's House which adjoins the Keep.

Inner bailey: Palace Range, Carlisle Castle, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Palace range. Early C14 with extensive 1819-21 alterations; stonework restored in late 1970s. Squared red sandstone blocks. Graduated greenslate roof with coped gable at left. 4 regularly-spaced sash windows with glazing bars in stone reveals, the opening cut through earlier infilled windows which can be clearly traced. Left return wall was formerly covered by the Long Hall (demolished in 1812) retaining former linking ground floor and upper floor (now blocked) doorways and roof crease. Right return has a projecting stair turret which was originally internal (the Kitchen range and Queen Mary's Tower were originally here) with blind C14 tracery ribs under crenellated parapet (formerly a cupola). INTERIOR has been extensively altered but original floor levels and C16 fireplaces are visible in walls. HISTORY: A watercolour by Robert Carlyle c1791, in Carlisle Museum, shows the building before alteration and with its large upper floor chapel windows. Altered to barracks in 1821; left as a shell after fire of 1890 and re-roofed. Now Museum of the King's Own Royal Border Regiment and called Queen Mary's Tower (that building was demolished in 1835). Rear former C19 cookhouse, has central plank door and sash windows with glazing bars. for full details see McCarthy et al (1990). the Castle is a Scheduled Ancient Monument. Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Priory Church and Cathedral, now all Cathedral. Early C12 with various rebuildings until the early C15, with 1652 alterations to west end; minor 1764 alterations by Ewan Christian; 1950s restoration and vestry etc additions. Oldest parts are of mixed red and calciferous square sandstone blocks; the remainder is red sandstone ashlar, heavily restored, on chamfered plinth, with stepped buttresses carried up as pinnacles; string courses, dentilled cornices and solid parapets, battlemented on tower. Steeply pitched lead roofs, copper on south transept and flat on tower; coped gables, that at east end with numerous cross finials. Early C12 nave originally 7 bays, now 2 bays with a fragment of the 3rd bay remaining as buttresses, with aisles and north vestry. South transept also C12 with C13 chantry chapel (dedicated to St Catherine); north transept is late C14 incorporating part of C12 Structure (original transept thought to have been destroyed when the tower fell in 1380). tower rebuilt late C14/early C15. INTERIOR: 7 bay choir is internally C13 but completed in the late C14, the east window is probably c1380. Nave has triforium and clerestory in Norman style with some internal distortion due to subsidence; the west wall is c.1652 with 1870 windows; some of the other windows in the nave area are alter insertions; north door (now internal) was added in 1813-4 and gives access to the 1956 vestry. Blocked south doorway to cloisters appears to have been C12. South transept of similar Noram details, the south door is 1856 (here originally the dormitory range joined the Cathedral and roof line can be seen externally); chapel has panelled and traceried wooden screens of late C15. North transept has 1858 inserted north window to memory of Dean Tait's children replacing earlier windows of 1764 and c1380; former external window now internal, lit the crossing when the transept had a flat roof (similar windows over nave and south transept were removed in 1855-7 restoration). choir has C13 arches on clustered columns with elaborately carved capitals representing the 12 seasons. C15 choir stalls with later C15 mural painting on the backs. Barrel-vaulted ceiling is painted with stars on a blue ground and coats-of-arms of local gentry (originally to the design of Owen Jones in 1856 and replacing a similar medieval ceiling covered by a false ceiling in 1764). East window contains medieval glass in tracery head, the lower glass having been removed in 1764, was replaced with the present plain glass in 1862. for fuller details of the interior see Pevsner (1967) and the Pitkin guide to the Cathedral. Building Description

Fratry for the Priory of St Mary, now cathedral library, bookshop and cafe. Between 1465 and 1490. for Prior Gondibour, with c1690 alterations; 1809-11 restorations by Sir Robert Smirke and 1880-81 restorations by GE Street; late 1980s repairs with new stone (in progress at time of survey December 1989). Squared blocks of red sandstone on chamfered plinth (now below ground level but partly exposed at rear) with stepped buttresses, eaves cornice, slid parapet and angle pinnacles on south wall. 1880 graduated greenslate roof within parapets with coped gables and cross finial (when built the original roof was either flat or of very low pitch); 1880 ashlar end chimney stack. 7 bays comprising a 6-bay hall and service/stair bay, with undercroft; on an east-west alignment forming the south range of the priory cloister and joined to the Cathedral by the (now ruined) dormitory range. The north wall formerly had the lower part hidden by the roofed cloister walk, the corbeling and roof crease for which survive. Left paired pointed-arched doorway gives access to hall, within an 1880 porch in replica of 2 bays of the covered cloister walk (the windows in the porch are copies of the clerestory windows of the Fraternity). Between these doorways the fresh stonework represents the 1880 blocking of a central doorway and flanking windows inserted in c1690. Above are 2-light clerestory Perpendicular windows. The west wall has a shouldered arched doorway down steps to undercroft (probably a late C17 addition) and a large 6-light Perpendicular window. The east wall was formerly internal to the dormitory, off centre pointed arch door between undercrofts and a higher brick blocked segmental-arched doorway into the dormitory. Remains of the corbels and springers for the rib vaulting of the dormitory undercroft; above are the corbels, roof crease and joist holes for the dormitory roof. Part of the dormitory wall projects beyond the angle of the Fraternity and is repaired with brick. The south wall has low square-headed double chamfered windows lighting the undercroft. In the 5 bays above are large 3-light Perpendicular windows divided by buttresses and a smaller window lighting the pulpitum. Low doorways in recessed arches at right are under slated penticed porch. The right bay has a projecting octagonal turret lit by lancets which is carried up above the parapet. sloping roof crease for dormitory is carried around at right. INTERIOR: The interior of the undercroft has rib vaulting carried on central octagonal columns; at the junction of some ribs are the initials of TG (Thomas Gondibour) in Gothic script. Hall was extensively restored in 1880, but the shell is basically C15 and retains the pulpitum dais. The bookcases were designed by Street. Internal stairs have been altered, but spiral stairs in turret still lead to upper floor chamber now a muniment room. for illustrations before restoration see RW Billings (1840) plates XXXVIII-XLIV. Ruins of Dormitory of former Priory of St Mary, The Abbey, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Dormitory (or dorter) for the Priory of St Mary, now in ruins. Mid or late C13. Large blocks of red sandstone with ashlar dressings. this former 2-storey building extended in a north-south alignment from the south transept of the cathedral and joined the frater at right angles, forming the east range of the cloisters. The west wall survives in part at ground floor level and has a pointed arched doorway with trumeau; this gave access through the underfront as a vestibule for the Chapter House opposite. The east wall has almost entirely gone, only the pointed arched doorway into the Chapter House survives. Inside the west wall are the springers for the rib vaulting of the undercroft, which continue along the east wall of the Frater; on the inside of the east wall is a further springer. On the east side of the Chapter House doorway (inside the chapter HUse) is the beginning of the ribbed blind arching. Excavations (unpublished in the 1950s revealed the ground level one metre below the present surface with medieval tiles in place in the Chapter House (now lifted). The slype arches which continued the wall to link with the Cathedral on the north were removed in 1809 as part of the new layout of the Cathedral grounds (see Carlisle Journal, 15 April 1809). For proposals to convert the ruins into the Cathedral Library in 1693, see JH Martindale, CWAAS, trans.NS, XXIV. An engraving from a drawing by Thomas Hearne, shows the ground floor intact in 1777 and a similar drawing viewed from the Cloisters by Robert Carlyle c1791, are in Carlisle Museum. (Cumb & West. Abbey Gate and Gatehouse, The Abbey, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Formerly known as: Abbey Street Lodge The Abbey. Gate Tower to St Mary's Priory and attached gatehouse. For Prior Slee, inscribed and dated 1528. Weathered red sandstone ashlar, some dressings of calciferous sandstone, on chamfered plinth, string courses and eaves cornice; clasping buttresses carried up on each angle as stone chimney stacks. Graduated greenslate roofs with coped gables. 2-storey, single-bay gate tower, with attached low 2-storey, 2-bay gatehouse at rear right. At the top of Abbey Street and was the main gate from that street into the Priory, now a gate into the Cathedral grounds. The Abbey Street facade has a large central rounded archway with triple chamfer; the vaulted arch has a further recessed round archway fitted with double gates and a left round arch pedestrian gate. Over the arch is a 3-light Tudor window with hoodmould; gable above. The rear is similar to the facade but with Latin inscription on the arch and the window above without hood. The gatehouse projects with a gable and then a half gable and appears to be contemporary with the tower but sash windows have been inserted, some are perhaps in the original surrounds. From the roof crease on the left of the archway it appears that there was a corresponding gatehouse symmetrically placed on that side, which was demolished to make way for the Bishop's Library, nearby, in 1699 (or during the civil War). For further details see Perriam, CWAAS, Trans.NS LXXXVII. INTERIORS not inspected. Included in this listing is the fragment of wall which extends over Dean Tait's Lane to join with No.48 Abbey Street and now cut by a C19 archway; this could be the remains of an earlier gate tower on this site, or an adjoining Priory building. (Cumb & West Antiquarian & Archaeological Soc., New Series: Perriam DR: LXXXVII: The Demolition of the Priory of St Mary: P.142-4).

Prior's tower with hall range, extension and adjoining stable; now Deanery, museum and flats. For the Priory of St Mary, Carlisle. Late C15 tower and hall with C17 extensions and alterations; further 1853 extensions by James Stewart (internal alterations now partly removed, 1882 by CJ Ferguson); 1949-51 alterations dated 1950 on rainwater head. Red sandstone ashlar, some of the extensions are of squared red sandstone, on chamfered plinth, with string courses on tower and battlemented parapet. Flat lead roof on tower; otherwise greenslate roofs with coped gables and kneelers; full and half-gabled dormers; ashlar ridge and end chimney stacks. Stable range has sandstone flag roof. The main facade faces towards the Cathedral. Central square tower of 2 storeys over basement; the hall range at the right is 2-storey, 3 bays with projecting 2-storey extension; left 3-storey, 3-bay extension and beyond is the single storey, 4-bay stables. Tower has a central 2-light cusped headed oriel window, corbelled out, in a deeply chamfered surround under hoodmould and pent roof. Other small irregular casement windows; upper floor 2-light mullioned window with diamond leaded panes. The right return has a high crease for the original roof on the hall range. Rear has similar oriel and other windows. INTERIOR has rib-vaulted basement, contemporary with the tower; panelled upper floor room with panelled doors; painted wooden ceiling has decorative and heraldic devices, applied during Prior Senhouse's term of office c1494 - 1521. Angle newel stair to top storey and roof. The Deanery has a 1950 right doorway with projecting stone porch, in a single-storey 3-bay pent extension of 1853. First floor is C17 with 2-light mullioned windows and late C17 carved panel of Bishop's arms. 2-light gabled 1/2 dormers (appear on a view of 1715). The projecting facing double gable extension at right is of 1853 with 2- and 3-light mullioned and cross-mullioned windows. The rear wall of the hall range is probably C15 stonework but now with sash and mullioned windows. INTERIOR has ground floor C16 segmental-arched stone fireplaces; an upper floor fireplace is on corbels. Now internal front wall has former C17 doorway. Wooden staircase is probably of 1882 by CJ Ferguson; C19 panelled doors. Extensive repairs in 1988-9 required the gutting of the hall range. No.5 (the left extension) was formerly part of the Deanery but now a flat. Central panelled door in stone architrave with segmental pediment and flanking windows in stone architraves were all inserted in 1950 when an 1853 pent extension was removed; left blocked opening has a double chamfered surround; a right projecting stone porch (added since 1950) gives access to tower. Above are sash windows with glazing bars in C17 stone architraves with hood cornices. the V-jointed quoining at the left of calciferous sandstone is 2-storey and above it changes to red sandstone; the third storey was added in C19 with 1/2 gabled dormers. rear 2- and 3-light mullioned and cross mullioned windows. INTERIOR altered. Prior's Stables, Nos 5A and 5B, have a left recessed doorway now with C20 door, the C15 flattened arch with the initials TG (for Prior Thomas Gondibour, prior c1464-1494). Further right C15 doorway has segmental chamfered arch with hoodmould. Between the doors are a small and large sash window with glazing bars in chamfered surrounds; further left C20 window in C20 opening. Left return has C20 double plank doors in C20 former garage opening. The roof has to be rebuilt in the 1960s. INTERIORS not inspected. It is now thought that the tower was built in the 1490s, not c1507 as previously thought. For further details see JH Martindale, CWAAS, Trans.NS VIII; Perriam CWAAS, Trans.NS LXXXVII. Eden Bridge, Carlisle, Cumbria

Road bridge over River Eden. 1812-15, for the County of Cumberland by Robert Smirke, with various minor alterations and 1932 widening by Percy Dalton, City Engineer. Reeded calciferous sandstone ashlar. 5 segmental arches of double width, on rounded piers, with flush voussoirs, string course and solid parapet. North to south alignment. Abutments project at either side on the south and the north-west but replaced by steps on north-east as an entrance to Rickerby Park; the recesses in the parapets above the abutments have a stone seat with flanking rectangular cast-iron gas lamp brackets now surmounted by C20 electric light globes. A pedestrian tunnel was cut through the south in 1902, lined with white glazed bricks; external stone steps were added on the south-west side to reach the tunnel; a ramp gives access at the other side. Under the arches can be seen the cleaner stonework of the extension on the east side which has a face exactly matching that on the west but of new stone. Cut onto the south-west abutment are the various flood dates and levels, but most are now weathered - DEC 13TH 1852 AND 1857 are visible. Fixed onto the bridge parapet are various bronze plaques giving a brief history and a central one recording the widening. Under the arches in the river bed are the remains of a C19 bridge and its associated piling discovered during dredging in 1951. for history of site see Hogg CWAAS, TRANS.NS LII and Macdonald, CWAAS, Trans.NS LXXI. This was one of the two bridges built together but the southern channel of the river was left dry and gradually filled; the southern bridge was demolished in 1969-70 to make way for the inner ring road. A Scheduled Ancient Monument. (Cumb & West. Building Description

Office block for factory, now water company offices. Mid C19 with extensive alterations and additions in 1899, by Henry Higginson, with further early C20 alterations. Snecked red sandstone with flush ashlar quoins and stone-bracketed metal gutter. Hipped slate roof with C20 metal vents. Originally single storey over basement, 9 bays; increased by extra storey in 1899. With 3 bays added to right. Pilastered sandstone porch, reached by flanking flights of stone steps with patterned cast-iron railings, was central to original build. Inscription on porch says FERGUSON BROTHERS LIMITED REGISTERED OFFICE. Sash windows, some with glazing bars on the lower floor, all in stone surrounds. INTERIOR not inspected. Illustration of 1854 in Centenary: Ferguson Brothers, Carlisle 1824-1924, shows the office as built. Plans for the alterations approved 9 June 1899 are in Cumbria County Record Office, Ca/E4/13177. A postcard of c1905 shows the 2-storey, 9-bay building. Further office extensions to left are not of interest. (Centenary: Ferguson Brothers, Carlisle 1824-1924: P.40).

Building Description

Former cotton factory, including beetling and dampening rooms, now water company offices. 1850s; repaired 1864, further late C19 and early C20 additions, for Ferguson Brothers. English garden wall bond brickwork on chamfered plinth (all dressings of red sandstone) and stone bracketed metal gutter. Hipped double-span slate roof with extensive skylights. Original building was 2 storeys, 9 bays, increased to 13 bays and an extra storey added in 2 phases. Main facade faces the river; regularly spaced casement windows with glazing bars, the ground floor windows boarded over, each with a sandstone sill within brick reveals and with flat brick arches. One of the top windows has a round vent. Projecting from lower storey polished granite drinking fountain dated 1870 (now damaged). Similar 5-bay returns. INTERIOR not inspected. This building does not appear on drawing of the factory c1854, but was there in 1853 when it was damaged by floods; plans for its repair are in Cumbria County Record Office, Ca/E4/880 and 5908. The fountain date may signify the extension to 13 bays and the different coloured brickwork shows that the upper storey was added after the extension; photographs show that the right 6 bays were raised before 1907 and the left 7 bays were raised by 1920.

Building Description

Textile mill. 1865 with 1907 and 1913 extensions, for Ferguson Brothers. Brick walls, with brick interval and angle pilasters; dentiled brick cornice. Flat roof not visible from ground; hipped slate roof on tower. Large rectangular spinning mill, 4 storeys, 14 bays with 5-bay returns and angle tower rising 2 storeys higher. Steel casement windows mostly with glazing bars in brick reveals and flat brick arches. The tower was added in 1907 for a 7,500 gallon water tank and the 4 northern bays are of different coloured bricks, thought to have been added in 1913. INTERIOR: previous list description refers to concrete floors and cast-iron columns. Building plans for the water tank are in cumbria County Record Office Ca/E4/13896. A drawing of 1854 shows the earlier factory building on this site. Has group value with the office block of Holme Head Works.

Tullie House, Castle Street, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

House now part of museum; with library, school of art, museum and technical institution extensions now also part of the museum. House dated 1689 on lead rainwater head, for Thomas Tullie (later Dean of Carlisle); mid C18 alterations and additions. Extensions inscribed on foundation stone LAID BY BENJAMIN SCOTT ESQ JP MAYOR OF CARLISLE MAY 26TH 1892; completion date of 1893 over library entrance; by CJ Ferguson of Carlisle; later minor alterations and additions. The buildings extend from Abbey Street to Castle Street in an F-shape with attached gate tower, the lower arm of the F being the original house. ORIGINAL HOUSE: red sandstone ashlar (possibly over brick) on chamfered plinth, with V-jointed calciferous sandstone quoins and dressings; painted (wooden?) eaves modillions and cornice. graduated greenslate roofs with coped right gable; rebuilt calciferous sandstone ashlar ridge and end chimney stacks. 2 storeys, 7 bays of double pile. Central panelled double doors in bolection surround and pulvinated frieze and console-bracketed broken segmental pediment. Sash windows with glazing bars in calciferous sandstone architraves on moulded sills, under alternating segmental and triangular pediments. Left return is hidden by 1892-3 extensions. Right return wall is of painted incised stucco, the valley between the roof is hidden by a heightened gable wall. Rear 3 bays are thought to be a 1730s or 1740s extension, with sash windows in painted stone surrounds. Right, large staircase sash window with glazing bars, could be in an C18 enlarged surround. INTERIOR has been extensively altered in the mid C18, but some of the painted panelled walls could be late C17. Panelled doors in painted wooden architraves and internal panelled shutters. Original oak staircase has turned and carved barley-twist balusters, ball newel posts and heavy moulded handrails; dado stair panelling. Fireplace in ground floor was revealed in recent renovation. Upper floor: oak full-height panelled room is mid C18, with carved fluted pilasters and Corinthian capitals; wooden cornice. This room also has 2 identical C18 white marble fireplaces with elaborate cast-iron grates. Moulded plaster ceiling cornices, some of which could be C17. Other bedroom fireplaces have been covered but retain cast-iron grates; one in a bolection surround. EXTENSIONS: Red sandstone; graduated greenslate roofs with some skylights. 2 and 3 storeys of numerous bays, comprising a GATE TOWER (librarian's house) now storerooms, facing onto Castle Street. Red sandstone ashlar on moulded plinth with string courses, pilasters and open parapet with carved lettering TULLIE HOUSE. 3 storeys, 3 bays. The left bay is recessed and carried up to form clock tower with copper-domed cupola and weather vane. Other 2 bays have left through archway with scrolled wrought-iron gates incorporating the city arms; 2- and 3-light cross-mullioned windows; 3- and 4-light mullioned windows on the upper floor. Over the entrance is a panel inscribed PUBLIC LIBRARY, MUSEUM AND SCHOOL OF ART. Low rear right-angle range links this with the library. PUBLIC LIBRARY (with art gallery over) is of quarry faced red sandstone with ashlar dressings on moulded plinth and eaves cornice. 3-storey, 2-bay entrance hall has doorway facing the gatehouse; 2- and 3-light stone mullioned windows. Adjoining is the main library wing 2 storeys, 7 bays in L shape. Projecting 2-bay reading room has canted bay windows and blind panels above, carried up from basement with metal grille over the void. 5-bay newspaper room has tall casement windows in eared architraves with cornice and blind panels above. MUSEUM is also L-shaped, linking with the old house and library. Separately listed in 13/11/72 as the Stable Block. entrance hall block has panelled double doors and fanlight in stone surround under pediment; above is a scrolled oval panel. return has stone mullioned windows. The Natural HISTORY gallery extends towards Abbey Street and has 7 windows similar to those on the newspaper room with panels above. The 3-bay facade on Abbey Street has off-centre loading bay with panelled and glazed double doors in large segmental-arched quoined surround. Over it is an oval panel of carved city arms. Tall casement windows with glazing bars in stone architraves and panelled aprons under pediments. The rear wall facing towards Annetwell Street is of brick; part was knocked through for a library extension in 1936-7 (now demolished). A new Heritage Centre, to form part of Tullie House, is in progress at the time of survey (1989). INTERIOR of both entrance halls have stone cantilever staircases with scrolled wrought iron rails incorporating shield of the city arms and moulded wooden handrail; decorative dado tiles on greens and browns, some of the tiling carried into the library. Some original doors in library and museum retain their etched glass names. for details of the history of this site, the houses and its occupants see Bruce Jones CWAAS, Trans. NS LXXXVIII; C Roy Hudleston, Cumberland News (1954); and for the 1891-2 fight to save the staircase in the proposed museum and library development see CJ and RS Ferguson correspondence in the Jackson collection of Cumbria County Library. Tullie House, Castle Street, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Wall, gate piers, gates and railings for garden of Tullie House (qv). Late C17 (could be C19 imitation). red sandstone ashlar gate piers and wall; cast-iron gates and railings. Off centre large rectangular rusticated piers on moulded plinth, surmounted by projecting cornice and bracketed ball finials. Flanking low wall on moulded plinth under flat moulded coping. spear and scrolled railings. Fresh appearance of stone suggests replacement. Celia Fiennes on a visit to Carlisle in 1698 said 'one house which was the Chancellors (Thomas Tullie) built of stone very lofty 5 good sarshe (sash) windows on the front and this within a stone wall'd garden well kept and iron gates to discover it to view with stone pillars,' see Christopher Morris (ed.) (1947). Brown (1951) says 'Tullie House has formerly a high wall in front, which Mr George Dixon pulled down.' However a 1791 watercolour of the Abbey gate by Robert Carlyle shows the Tullie House wall in the background and it looks as it does today. (Morris, Christopher: The journeys of Celia Fiennes: 1947-: P.202; Brown JW: Round Carlisle Cross: 1951-: P.113).

Building Description

House divided into 2 shops with offices above. Late C17 with extensive late C18 alterations. Painted brick walls on chamfered plinth. Roof of C20 tiles has had its ridge moved forward; a right kneeler survives; C19 and C20 ridge and gable brick chimney stacks. 3 storeys, 4 bays; double-depth plan. Off-centre panelled door (to No.42) and blind fanlight in dentilled open pedimented doorcase. Right panelled door and overlight in pedimented surround. Left early C20 shop front has central recessed glazed door and flanking plate-glass windows under leaded overlight. Sash windows, most with glazing bars, those on second floor are smaller. Around the doorway to No.42 can be seen the cut-away C17 alternate block surround and the brickwork clearly shows where original fenestration has been blocked. Rear wall has a late C17 floral lead rainwater head and downpipe, which compares with the one nearby on Tullie House. INTERIOR has some C18 detail, but nothing survives from the C17. Entrance hall of No.42 has rib-vaulted plaster ceiling on console brackets and heraldic shields. Passage to stair has wooden panelled dado. The full height early C18 staircase with turned and fluted balusters and moulded handrail is particularly fine. C18 panelled doors. HISTORICAL NOTE: Cumberland News (1954) says 'Dr Waugh's... own private residence was the house in Abbey Street, known as Eaglesfield House... which he leased in 1730. The Chancellor's (Waugh's) coat of arms is preserved in this house, which was sold to Dr Carlyle in 1772'. (Cumberland News: 17 September 1954).

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Includes: No.1 Lowthian Lane. Includes: No.45 Lowther street. Terrace of 12 shops with offices and flats above; former pub behind. 1851 with C20 alterations. Flemish bond brickwork with light headers; calciferous sandstone dressings, string courses and bracketed cornice, partly painted. Slate roof (not visible from the ground) with some dormers; C19 and C20 brick ridge chimney stacks. 3 storeys, 31 continuous bays in upper floor with one step in the cornice, but divided into 2-, 3- and 4-bay shops. Ground floor shop fronts are C20, many dating from the 1970s and 80s, but of particular interest are Nos 5-9 (Will Nixon & Sons) and no11 (John Watt & Son), which retain their early C20 shop features. Nos 43, 45 and 47 also have early C20 shop fronts. Most sash windows above survive with glazing bars, in brick reveals; string course sills; windows on first floor have bracketed hoods. No.51 at the end of the street becomes No.45 Lowther Street on its 3-bay return of similar details. INTERIORS not inspected. At the back of Nos 5-9, and forming an integral part of it, is No.1 Lowthian Lane, the former early C19 Rose and Crown Inn, which closed in 1916. This is lower, 2 storeys, 2 bays with a right door and left shop window; cement rendered. The former brass bar which was attached in front of the window was removed to Carlisle Museum in the early 1980s. INTERIOR not inspected. Bank Street was a newly formed street in 1849 (Carlisle Journal, 21 December 1849). Because of the existence of White Hart Lane to the south, only properties on the north side of Bank Street could be built and the construction of these is referred to in Carlisle Journal, 6 June 1851. (Carlisle Journal: 21 December 1849; Carlisle Journal: 6 June 1851).

Building Description

House now part of college. Late 1840s or early 1850s. Incised cement render on squared plinth with raised quoins (dressings of calciferous sandstone), sill band and dentilled wooden cornice. Graduated greenslate roof, partly hipped; cement rendered ridge and rear chimney stacks. 2 storeys, 4 bays with 3-bay left return, double depth plan with cross-wing to right. Storeyed wing is gabled with a canted bay window. Left bays have a right panelled door with overlight and side lights in stone surround. Sash windows with original margin glazing bars in plain reveals. Between floors is a stone balcony on large stone brackets with wrought iron balusters and handrail. Right and rear C20 extensions. INTERIOR has panelled doors in panelled reveals and some panelled shutters. Moulded plaster ceiling cornices and some central roundels in principal rooms. Cantilever stone staircase has scrolled cast-iron balusters and moulded mahogany handrail; glazed stair cupola has ribbed plaster vault on console bracketed cornice. HISTORY: when built this was called The Villa and is marked as such on the 1865 OS map, later it was known as Stanwix Villa. JD Carr lived here between 1845 and 1854, and it may have been built for him. It appears the name was changed by James Morton when he came to live here in 1900, see Jocelyn Morton (1971). It was compulsorily purchased by the City Council in 1949, see Carlisle Journal, (1949) and it became the College of Art in 1951. Building Description

County Gaol wall. 1824-7 by Christopher Hodgson. High snecked red sandstone wall without plinth, with rounded coping. Extends from the Crown Court down Court Square Brow, along Borough Street and up Bush Brow, enclosing the former gaol yard. Nearest the Crown Court the wall stands to its full original height of almost 10 metres, with the blocked archway into the former stone yard. Along Borough Street and Bush Brow its height has been reduced. The squared gate piers on Bush Brow are not 1820s but are included for group value. Christopher Hodgson's original drawings for the gaol and this wall, dated 1824, are in Carlisle Library. Building Description

Formerly Red Lion Hotel, with ground floor shops and hotel above, renamed in 1990 and recently renovated. 1894-6 for Samuel Bousfield by J Murchie. Calciferous sandstone ashlar with string courses, sill bands and bracketed cornice. Graduated greenslate roof with lead hips on corner and pedimental dormer windows; ashlar and brick ridge chimney stacks. 3 storeys and attic, 13 bays, higher 3-storey with attic corner block with angled bay and 2-bay left return facing onto The Crescent under pavillion roof. C20 panelled doors and radial fanlight in round-headed surround with polished granite pilasters, under bracketed hood. Incised lettering over door 'Red Lion Hotel'. Ground floor C20 shop windows divided by original polished granite pilasters. Cantled oriel window over entrance has pediment. Other windows are sashes in plain stone reveals, under carved brackets supporting balustraded balcony. Initials S.B on keystone over door (the owner). The corner range has paired sash windows with rounded heads on first floor in pilastered surrounds with lion's head keystones; flattened-arched windows above in stone architraves. INTERIOR: ground floor mostly taken up with shops, but at the rear is a Royal Doulton tiled billiard room (most removed 1990). Plans dated 1893 are in Cumbria County Council Records office, CA/E4/12227. A photograph in JP Templeton, (1988), which must have been taken in 1896 because it has a horse bus on it, shows workmen completing the roof. (Templeton JP: Carlisle in Old Picture Postcards: P.27).

Listing Title: THEAKSTONS CARLISLE BREWERY

Statutory Reference: 671-1/06/00060 Grade: II Delisted Date:

Location Address

The Old Brewery, Bridge Street, Carlisle, CA2 5SX

Building Description

Brewery, now part being converted to hall of Residence for University of Northumbria. Early and late C19 for the Carlisle Old Brewery company, possibly with some C18 fabric; later alterations and additions. Red brick with Welsh and Lakeland slate roofs. 5 parallel ranges, tower and chimney. The ranges are of 3 storeys, presenting 5 gables to the river. Various largely altered openings. the gables, of which the 2 to the left are larger, have multi-brace king post truss infill and are surmounted by gabled vents. The tower is of 4 storeys with plain openings and a pyramid roof, with a gabled dormer to each face and a decorative iron fence to the apex platform. Tall stone stack of tapering square section. Away from the tower the elevations have many segmental-headed windows with stone sills and there are a number of altered doorways. INTERIOR: Little remains of the buildings' original interior. There are 3 ranges of wide-span king post roofs at right angles to the river. These are bolted and strapped with iron and are of C19 date. HISTORY: the brewery opened in 1756 as Atkinson and son, and some buildings, although apparently not these, are shown on the city Plan of 1794. The core of the present building is shown on a plan of 1864 in Cumbria County Record Office (Ca/E4/889). The present buildings were largely erected by Sir Richard Hodgson whose brewery it was until nationalisation in 1916 when it became the brewery for the Liquor control Board, later the Carlisle and district State Management Scheme. It was denationalised in 1971 and sold to Theakston's in 1974. After being left derelict for some years, approval was given for a substantial part of the C19 section of the Brewery to be demolished and the remainder to be refurbished. It is evident that many of the present buildings were developed as maltings and adapted to brewing. Included partly for historic interest.

House now office. Dated and inscribed J & M F 1798 on shared rainwater head, with extensive early and late C19 alterations (a further rainwater head inscription C & A F 1898 is probably only commemoration the centenary). Calciferous sandstone ashlar facade (remainder of walls of Flemish bond brick) on red sandstone plinth; first-floor sill course and eaves cornice. Hipped graduated slate roof; shared original ridge brick chimney stack. 3 storeys, 3 symmetrical bays, built as a pair with No.17. Double depth, central stair plan. Facade is completely early C19 and can be compared with the different original facade of No.17. Central C20 double doors under moulded entablature and recessed semicircular arch. Flanking C20 windows (sill level lowered in 1989) in semicircular arches to match doorway. Interval ground floor red sandstone pilastered, paired beyond windows. First floor central sash window with glazing bars in plain stone reveals flanked by tripartite windows under elliptical super-ordinate arches. Upper floor windows in plain stone reveals and stone sills. Return wall faces onto Long Lane with some of the ground floor detail continued round the corner. Rear 2-storey bowed bay window and round-headed staircase window with intersecting glazing bars. INTERIOR has rear principal ground floor room with elaborate moulded plaster ceiling cornice. Original cantilever stone staircase with scrolled wrought-iron balusters and moulded wooden handrail. Some original panelled doors and panelled internal shutters. HISTORY: This was the house of the Forster family; a Joseph Forster married Mary Robinson on 11 December 1785 at St Mary's Church and it is possible that they are the J & M F on the rainwater head; when their banking business collapsed on 1837, the house was to be sold and was advertised in Carlisle Journal, 13 April 1839, described as having a 'polished white stone ashlar front'. For illustration see Robert Fell (1981). Home for the Carlisle Liberal Club 1881-5 and later the office of the Carlisle and District State management Scheme until 1971. (Carlisle Journal: 13 April 1839; Fell, Robert: Carlisle Liberal Club Ltd. Centenary, 1881-1981: 1981-: P.2).

Building Description

Terrace of 3 houses, now offices, flats and restaurant. 1823, for and by Paul Nixon, a Carlisle architect with his own marble works. Calcareous sandstone ashlar, rusticated on the ground floor with sill bands and modillioned eaves cornice. Graduated greenslate roof with skylights and dormer windows at rear; C19 ridge and end brick chimney stacks, some rendered and painted. 3 storeys, 9 bays; each house of 3 bays; double depth houses. 3 left railed gated in railed void, give access down stone steps to cellar door under each entrance. Each house has steps at right to panelled door and overlight with Greek-key pattern, in prostyle Ionic porch. Sash windows with glazing bars in plain reveals on ground floor and cellar; in stone architraves with cornices and panelled aprons on first floor, those over doorways with console brackets. smaller attic windows. INTERIOR has moulded plaster ceilings on both floors, some with roundels and panels (rib vaulted in the hall of No26). Panelled internal marble fireplaces in most principal rooms; the white marble one in the first floor room of no.26 has a figured frieze, probably carved by David Dunbar, Nixon's principal sculptor (Nixon's specialty was carved fireplaces). Panelled doors in panelled reveals, some of mahogany; original staircases, that in No.26 is spiral with patterned cast-iron balusters, in a domed well. HISTORY: The Carlisle Patriot, 5 July 1823, says 'the houses now in course of erection in Castle Street, by Paul Nixon, will be a great ornament to the town - the beautiful white stone and architecture are worthy of each other'. that these are the houses referred to is confirmed by BC Jones, CWAAS.Trans., NS, LXXXVIII, but he wrongly dated the terrace to 1829 on the evidence of land tax assessment records. (Cumb. and West Antiquarian & Archaeological Soc., New Series: Jones, Bruce: LXXXVII: Before Tullie House: P.141; Carlisle Patriot: 5 July 1823).

Building Description

House divided into flats. 1884-5 for William Hudson Scott (of the Metal Box Co) by George Dale Oliver of Carlisle. Glazed red bricks on moulded brick plinth, with red sandstone dressings and terracotta tile decoration. Red tiled roof; original moulded brick ridge chimney stacks. 3 storeys, 3 bays, with 4-bay return on Currie Street; markedly asymmetrical in the manner of A Waterhouse. Facade left bay projects to full height with coped gables, kneelers and decorative tiles; the ground floor has a canted bay cross-mullioned window; 2-light cross-mullioned paired windows above and upper floor 3-light windows. The remaining bays have a triple-arched loggia containing an external stair to front door; the loggia entrance has a pointed arch and scrolled iron gates; other painted arches rise with the stair and have low arched balusters. the windows above are simpler, some with the mullions removed and a French window giving access to balcony over loggia, which has C20 iron railings carried round the return. The return has a left 2-storey segmental bow with 4-light brick mullioned windows; to the right a large decorative gable projection with cross mullioned windows and a half dormer. recess between has similar cross-mullioned windows and a half dormer. principal gables are filled with decorative terracotta panels. INTERIOR not inspected. HISTORY: Carlisle Journal, 1 May 1885, records the acceptance of the design for exhibition at the Royal Academy; it was also illustrated in The Building News. William Hudson Scott died here in 1907 (Carlisle Journal, 18 January 1907) and it was converted to a Private School called Red Gables. School closed in December 1966 and building, which had been extensively altered internally in 1907, was gutted to form flats. Art Nouveau stained glass internal details were recorded before gutting. Original plans are in Cumbria County Record Office CA/132/1907/2 and DX/991/1. A photograph showing the ground floor of the building before 1907 is in Templeton (1988), and Carlisle Museum have a photograph taken shortly after construction. The Pheasant Inn, Church Street, Caldewgate, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Public house, probably originally a row of 3 houses. Late C18 with extensive C19 and C20 alterations. Painted stucco walls over brick. Graduated greenslate roof; with stucco walls over brick. Graduated greenslate roof; with stucco end chimney stacks. 2-storey, 5 bays, with lower rear 3-bay extensions on returns, forming overall U-shape. 2 symmetrically-placed double plank doors and patterned overlights in plain reveals. Sash windows with glazing bars, that in centre is a canted oriel, all in plain reveals. Modern fascia and sign over ground floor windows. Projecting beam at right supports a carved wooden pheasant. Similar doors and windows in returns and extensions. INTERIOR: extensive C20 alterations. Asquith's Survey of 1853 does not show this as a pub, it appears on the 1865 OS map as the Silloth Railway Inn (that railway was opened on 28 August 1856). It was called The Pheasant for the first time in the 1873 directory. Became a State Managed pub in 1916 and sold out of state control in 1972. Removal of stucco in 1970s revealed blocked earlier windows.

Building Description

Church of England church on a medieval site. 1841-3 by John Hodgson; 1843 repairs; 1893 alterations and 1907 extension. Red sandstone ashlar in irregularly-coursed small blocks, on chamfered plinth, with clasping buttresses carried up as pinnacles on tower and nave; stone-bracketed metal gutters. Graduated greenslate roof with coped gables and cross finials. West 3-stage square tower/porch; 10-bay nave with transepts; aspidal chancel with north organ chamber (former vestry) and south vestry extension. Built in Commissioners style. Tower has west double plank doors in painted chamfered arch; tall lancets above on 2 levels, the upper ones with louvred vents; clock faces on 3 sides. Nave and transepts have tall lancet windows. Vestries have 2- and 3-light windows some with cusped heads, others rounded. Apse has arcade of small rounded arched windows. INTERIOR: rib-vaulted plaster ceiling in nave and aspe. Windows mostly of plain glass; some C20 stained glass. C19 painted board giving list of church benefactors and Hanoverian kings' arms 1714-1801. Late C19 hexagonal wooden pulpit and benches. 1893 granite-pillared sandstone font. Extensive white marble wall plaques some with carved portrait heads, draped figures etc, to Robert Ferguson d.1816 (see Marshall Hall, 1979), Eliza Graham d.1852 and John Chambers d.1850 are all by John Kirkbride 1786-1854; Esther Bonnel d.1822, Isabella Patrickson d.1854, Charles James Graham d.1847 and Wm Sowerby d.1855 are all by Thomas Nelson 1807-90; Charles Wm Thompson d.1843 by Christopher Woodall 1795-1859; Maria Woodrouffe Head d.1854 by Bedford of Oxford (this is probably J Bedford of Oxford Street, London); Capt Hugh Patrickson d.1821 by Paul Nixon 1768-1850. HISTORY: The foundation stone was laid on 1 June 1841 and it opened in 1843, but a fire on 21 December 1843 destroyed the wooden fittings and roof; for further details see Taylor (1982). Built on the site of a Roman Wall fort. (Marshall Hall: The Artists of Cumbria: 1979-: P.50 Taylor G: A Brief History of Stanwix: 1982-).

Building Description

Vicarage for Church of St Michael nearby, now private house. 1809 incorporating part o the C18 vicarage for Reverend Joseph Hudson; rear 1890 extensions. Flemish bond brickwork on chamfered plinth (all dressings of calciferous sandstone). Hipped graduated greenslate roof, end brick chimney stacks. 2 storeys, 4 bays, single-depth plan, with rear extensions. Off-centre top-glazed panelled door and overlight in Ionic porch with dentilled cornice. Tall sash windows, those on ground floor almost level with ground, all with glazing bars, in brick reveals with stone sills and flat brick arches. INTERIOR: panelled shutters and panelled doors; black marble fireplace in principal room. HISTORY: In 1828, the vicar, Joseph Hudson, stated that he had added the new facade in 1809 (Cumbria County Record Office D/Hud/13/40/2; plans for the rear extension by J S Seymour are in CRO, Ca/E4/14172). Previous list description states that this was on the site of the Roman fort at Stanwix, but is just outside the west wall of the fort and built partly over the infilled fort ditch. the further rear stable/byre range, converted to St Michael's Parish Centre in 1983 has extensive alterations.

Building Description

House, now part of College. Early C19 for Richard Lowry, attorney. Flemish bond brickwork with light headers, on chamfered plinth (dressings of calciferous sandstone partly painted) with V-jointed quoins and sill band. Hipped graduated greenslate roof; rear C20 tiles; gable brick chimney stacks. 2 storeys, 5 symmetrical bays of double span; with central passage; lower 3-bay right extension. Central panelled door and radial fanlight in prostyle Doric porch. Flanking wooden caned bay windows with glazing bars are an insertion. Sash windows above with glazing bars in brick reveals and flat brick arches. Extension was probably for servants or stables, now with glazed doors and sash windows. Further stair projection on right return is an C20 addition. INTERIOR: panelled doors in fluted architraves; moulded plaster ceiling cornices; pilastered alcove in principal ground floor room. Hall has fluted pilaster arches with panelled soffits. Left stair has simple squared balusters and moulded mahogany handrail. Some fireplaces have fluted surrounds; some panelled shutters. Details of brickwork suggests the rear span is contemporary with the front. Previous list description suggests a date of c1794 but there is no evidence to substantiate this. Built on the site of Stanwix Roman Fort. The original entrance to the drive is on Brampton Road, and the house faces onto that road, but now entered from Church Street.

Citadel Station, Court Square, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Railway Station. 1847-8 for a Joint Station Committee, by Sir William Tite; extended 1879-80. Calciferous sandstone ashlar on chamfered plinth with stepped buttresses, eaves cornice and solid parapets. Graduated greenslate roofs with coped gables; some skylights and gabled roof dormers; ashlar ridge and end chimney stacks. Glazed overall roof behind the main facade covering the running lines. Tudor Style. Main facade is of 2 storeys, numerous bays in a long continuous row of differing roof levels. Central port-cochere of 5 bays, each pointed arch divided by a buttress carried up as a finial. Over each arch are coats-of-arms; central Royal arms flanked by those of Lancaster & Carlisle Railway and Caledonian Railway, remaining panels intended for Maryport & Carlisle Railway and Newcastle & Carlisle Railway left blank. Over, and in the offices to the right, are mullioned and transomed windows mostly of 3-lights. Between the entrance and offices is a clock tower which is octagonal on a square base. The single-storey former waiting and refreshment rooms (at the left) have a series of facing gabled projections with various mullioned and canted bay windows. Under the glazed roof, which is supported on a series of hooped trusses, is a central footbridge of crossed girders linking with the island platforms. The island buildings are also of 2 storeys, numerous bays in a continuous row; doorways and windows in restrained Tudor Style. INTERIOR: Numerous stone fireplaces in Tudor Style, some on former refreshment rooms are inscribed and dated, see Bonavia (1987), for an illustration of one. For further details and removal of part of roof in 1957-8, see Robinson (1986). Detached wall for demolished roof is listed separately. The building by Tite is among the most important early major railway stations in Britain. (Bonavia MR: Historic Railway Sites in Britain: 1987-: P.139; Robinson PW: Rail Centres, Carlisle: 1986-).

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Hotel built as The County and Station Hotel, latterly The County Hotel. Dated and inscribed on pediments G.H.H. (George Head Head, a Carlisle Banker) 1852; by Anthony Salvin; 1866-8 extension by Cory and Ferguson of Carlisle. Partly rusticated stucco on chamfered plinth with rusticated pilaster quoins, string course, sill band and cornice. Graduated greenslate mansard roof with shaped pedimental dormers; C20 copper pavilion roof on tower with ornamental rail to apex. Panelled stucco ridge and gable chimney stacks. Main facade, 3 storey, 5 bays with 15-bay return; further 2 bays at left over archway of Collier Lane; left projecting 5-storey, 3-bay tower is an 1866-8 addition. Main facade has central C20 glazed doors up steps in quoined segmental arch, under glazed canopy. Raised pilastered bay above surmounted by a segmental pediment with decorative coat-of-arms. Sash windows, those on upper floors with glazing bars; cornice hoods on first floor, pedimental over entrance; second floor smaller windows, that over entrance with festoon; shaped dormers. Left bays have C20 shop door and window; the archway is quoined with head keystone; sash windows similar to facade but without second floor sill band and dormers without pediments. Return of facade was added C19. C20 bay windows but original rusticated pilasters and overall signboard. Top storey has 5 round-headed window arcade in pilastered surround with balustraded aprons. Bracketed cornice and open fretted parapet. INTERIOR: the main rooms have elaborate ribbed plaster ceilings on ground floor; the ballroom which forms part of the 1866-8 extensions is of particular interest retaining much original detail, but otherwise rooms extensively altered to meet modern requirements. A labyrinth of cellars. HISTORY: The Carlisle Journal, 20 December 1851 records 'the building of the new hotel in Court Square has this week been let by tender to Mr Robinson of Penrith. the cost is to be £11,900'. Queen Victoria visited the hotel for a meal in 1853 (Cumberland News, 30 December 1853). Meason (1859) gives an engraving of the hotel with the Collier Lane arch (some think this was added later see Robinson (1986)). For further details see Allibone (1988). An 1865 photograph shows that the tower had not yet been built. Plans for the 1866 additions, using Fox and Barret's fireproof floors are in Cumbria County Council Record Office, CA/E4/766 and 773. Graduated greenslate roof, hipped on end houses; 2 houses with roof dormers; original shared ridge brick chimney stacks. 2 storeys; 2 and 3 bays each; built in groups of 2 and 3 houses, each group with a different roof line, stepped up the slop; No.1 has a 3 bay return facing onto Cavendish Terrace and No.9 a 3-bay return on St Georges Crescent. Left, right and sometimes central, panelled doors and overlight in prostyle Ionic porches, up steps. Sash windows, some with glazing bars, in stone architraves, many ground floor windows have been replaced with later C19 canted or square bay windows. Through segmental stone carriage arches between many of the houses, some are open but others have plank and panelled double doors. No.1 has a tetrastyle porch on its return. INTERIORS: some panelled shutters at ground- and first-floor windows; panelled doors. Principal rooms have moulded plaster ceiling cornices and central roundels; some have marble fireplaces. HISTORY: Built on land belonging to the Duke of Devonshire hence the terrace name. There is mention of Isaac Bond on 22-23 July 1832 of Devonshire Terrace (Cumbria County Record office, DX/556). The 1839 Tithe map shows 5 houses only, Nos 1 and 2 then being one house; Studholme's map of 1842 shows 6 houses; by 1847 there were 7 families living in the terrace and in 1850/1 the numbering seems to have ended at No.7. However, the Carlisle Patriot (1857) has a sale notice for No.9 so the terrace was certainly complete by that date, with its present numbering. (Carlisle Patriot: 13 November 1857).

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Also known as: Sacred Heart Convent DURRANHILL ROAD. House now convent. C1811, with 1830s extensions (date of 1862 on rainwater head appears to have no significance), all for Richard Lowry with chapel of 1909 and other extensions. snecked red sandstone ashlar on chamfered plinth, with V-jointed quoins, cornice and solid parapet; battlemented parapet on extensions. Local slate roof on original house; hipped graduated greenslate roof on extensions, ashlar ridge chimney stacks. The garden front (the rear as viewed from the road) is the original 2-storey, 3-bay house with a left 2-bay wing. The right wing is replaced (but partly incorporated) by a 2-storey, 7 bay extension, forming an overall L-shape. Original house has central panelled and partly-glazed door with fanlight within a prostyle Tuscan Porch, up steps. flanking full-height bowed windows with tripartite sashes in stone architraves, single over entrance. Left wing has sash windows in stone architraves. The extension has a single bay in line with the facade; squared battlemented bay window has 4-light mullions and transoms; 3-light similar window above under hoodmould. The 7-bay return has off-centre 2-bay projection. Ground floor 2-light casement windows and sash windows above with glazing bars all in painted stone surrounds under hoodmoulds. The extensions ends with the parapet carried up as a mock tower. Viewed from the road, a courtyard leads to a 5 bay facade, added to the rear of the original house. Central pointed Gothic arch under a hoodmould with recessed porch. Sash windows with glazing bars in pointed stone surrounds under hoodmoulds, 1:3:1, the outer bays slightly projecting. Similar windows on the extension. INTERIOR has alterations of different periods but retains much original detail; an elaborate moulded plaster ceiling in a now-divided room, partly with false ceilings, compares with ceilings in Coledale Hall, Newtown Road, of 1810. Hall has ribbed plaster ceiling and painted doors in gothic style. Some coloured marble fireplaces in original house and extension. Internal panelled shutters at some windows and panelled doors in fluted wooden surrounds. Staircase has wooden treads, turned balusters and moulded wooden handrail. HISTORY: The Lowry family were of 'Durnhill' before the present house, see CR Hudleston and RS Bumphrey (1978). An unexecuted design for the house of Richard Lowry is published in P Nicholson (1812-19), and A Taylor in Country Life (1989) dated the present house to 1811. Richard Lowry died in a fall from his horse in 1841, aged 66 and is buried in Wetheral graveyard; the house was then let by his daughter to various tenants. The eventual sale of the house to an order of nuns is recorded in Carlisle Journal (1906) and R Clerkin (1983). (Hudleston, C Roy: Cumberland families and Heraldry: 1978-: P.211; Nicholson, Peter: the Architectural Dictionary: 1812-1819: P.102, PL.III; Country Life: Taylor, Angus: 31 August 1989: The Dukery of Carlisle: P.95; Carlisle Journal: 19 January 1906; SHJM: Clerkin, Rosemary: A Heart for Others: 1983-: P.63).

Midland Bank, English Street, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Bank with manager's house, now bank and offices. Dated 1898 (re-facing of the 1849 building originally for the Carlisle City and District Banking Company, by TJ Cox) for the London and Midland Bank by T Taylor-Scott, with early 1920s extension for the London Joint City and Midland Bank by the same architect. Portland stone ashlar on chamfered plinth (part of basement is original 1849 calciferous sandstone ashlar from Lanerton Quarry); columns and pilasters of polished Shap granite; rusticated quoins, modillions eaves cornice with open balustraded parapet. Slate roof, not visible from ground; Portland stone ashlar ridge and end chimney stacks. Occupies a prominent corner site in the city centre; English Street facade of 2 storeys has original (1849) 3 bays at right, the corner bay now canted (1898) and 2 bays added at left in 1920s in same style; Bank Street facade has 2 storeys, 3 bays, but the former manager's house at right under same height balustrade is 3 storeys, 2 bays and treated differently (all of this facade incorporates the 1849 structure). Both facades for the banking hall are rusticated with large round headed windows with original margin and radial glazing bars, divided by granite pilasters under frieze with triglyphs, modern fascia over. Above are sash windows with upper glazing bars, in rusticated surrounds, with medallions above keystones. The angle entrance bay has an elaborate porch with painted Tuscan columns aligned along the axis of the principal elevations; a recessed round-arched doorway within, under a date panel; part-balustraded parapet over porch. Above a tripartite window with Gibbsian surround and segmental parapet containing a clock which breaks the cornice, all surmounted by copper-domed cupola with open arcade and weather vane finial. The former managers house has a left round headed doorway with segmental pediment on brackets; round headed ground floor window. All other windows are small sashes, those on upper floor with upper glazing bars only, in surrounds similar to the upper floor of the main facades. Area cast-iron railings around basement void are 1898 and early 1920s, broken in part for cash dispensing machines on Bank Street facade. INTERIOR: extensively altered in 1898; a blind arcade set high in the banking hall and projecting in the manner of machicolations is of this date; ribbed plaster ceilings in the banking hall have been carried out into the 1920s extension. HISTORY: Carlisle Journal, (1849) records the original building and the laying out of the new street, called Bank Street after this bank. Carlisle City & District Bank were taken over by the London and Midland Bank in 1896, Carlisle Journal (1896). Planned alterations were discussed in Carlisle Journal (1897). the alteration plans are in cumbria County Record Office, CA/E4/12846, dated 1897. The Carlisle Journal (1899) records the reopening after the alterations. for illustration of the bank before the alterations. For Directories show in 1920 No.29 English Street was vacant and in 1921 it formed part of the bank address, which suggests that this is when the extension was made. Wall and railings included in the listing. (Carlisle Journal: 21 December 1849; Carlisle Journal: 31 July/28 August; Carlisle Journal: 26 February 1897; Carlisle Journal: 23 June 1899; Perriam DR: Carlisle in Camera: 1988-: P.20).

4 Bank Street, Carlisle, CA3 8EU

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Includes: Nos. 2 and 4 BANK STREET. Bank and associated Bank chambers. 1875, for the Carlisle and Cumberland Banking Company, by Crosby & Hetherington of Carlisle. BARCLAYS BANK is of calciferous sandstone ashlar on moulded plinth with string courses, bracketed sill bands and cornice. Slate roof (not visible from ground) with original ashlar end chimney stack. 2 storeys, 5 bays; on an important corner position with angle bay and 3-bay return on Bank Street. Off centre C20 panelled doors in paired columned round-arched surround, heavily moulded with carved leaf capitals and label stops. Ground floor round-arched casement windows in columned surrounds, similar carved details as door; the 2 right windows have had their sills raised to incorporate cash-dispensing machines. The extreme right window was originally a door. First floor sash windows in chamfered stone surrounds with carved leaf decoration. Second floor sash windows in bolection surrounds. Similar doorway and windows on the Bank Street return. INTERIOR: detail hidden by C20 cladding. The ground floor banking hall extends into Bank Chambers, both with offices above. Carlisle Journal (1874 and 1875) reported that plans for the building had been passed, gave details of the architect, and later recorded the completion of the building. Original plans are in Cumbria County Record Office (CA/E4/400). For history of this bank see G Chandler, (1968). BANK CHAMBERS continue along the Bank Street facade adjoining the bank. Dated over entrance AD 1875; C20 alterations. Cream brickwork with calciferous sandstone ashlar dressings, flush quoins, string courses and cornice. slate roof (not visible from the ground) with original cream brick ridge chimney stack. 3 storeys, 5 bays. Left door and fanlight in pointed columned surround under hoodmould; inscribed in carved letters over door BANK CHAMBERS and date in angle of the hood. Ground floor windows were inserted in the 1980s to replace a C20 shop front, but in a style in keeping with this and the adjoining bank buildings; round headed stone arches in triple-chamfered surround. First floor columned arcade of round arches, has paired windows separated by blind arches, the pair on the left now blocked. Sash windows above in moulded brick reveals, with moulded stone lintels. INTERIOR extensively altered. (Carlisle Journal: 5 June 1874; Carlisle Journal: 17 September 1875; Chandler, George: Four Centuries of Banking: 1968-: P.318-320).

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Formerly known as: The Citadel. Crown Court and court Office on the site of the 1542 Citadel. 1810-17 (interior not completed until 1822) by Sir Robert Smirke. Red sandstone ashlar on chamfered plinth with string courses, machicolated cornice (in part) and battlemented parapets. Hipped lead roofs. Rounded tall tower is completely C19, on the site of the demolished western tower of the Citadel (of the same dimensions); clasping the NW side is a lower 2-storey office block of 6 bays, with mock gate projection into English Street; all in Gothic style and almost a mirror image of the Nisi Prius Court range opposite, with which it forms a pair. Tower has tall 2-light windows in rounded deeply-recessed chamfered arch, over small lancets. Office block has right double plank doors in pointed Gothic arch; similar off-centre doorway projects in a battlemented porch, now fitted with a casement window. Ground-floor stone mullioned windows in double chamfered surrounds. Larger 2-light Gothic windows above with central trefoil heads in pointed arches. Gate projection was formerly a passageway to the court; ends in 2 octagonal turrets flanking central arch under a cross vent; the side walls have been pierced by 2 pointed arches created in 1929 (formerly the pavement went around the turrets). INTERIOR of court retains its original galleried seating of panelled oak. The offices are internally divided on ground floor. Members' room has late C19 monogrammed carved oak fireplace with tiled and engraved slate fireback. Upper floor No.2 Courtroom has plain stone fireplace, pointed archways, dado panelling along one wall and rib-panelled plaster ceiling. In an outer corridor the removal of a false ceiling has revealed the earlier painting of the panelled ceiling. Marble statue of Major Aglionby by Musgrave Lewthwaite Watson, 1844, has been moved from the main entrance and temporarily boxed in to prevent damage during renovation work. Staircase has ribbed and traceried wooden ceiling with flat central skylight (void above). Grand Jury Room has dado oak panelling; pointed arches, one an alcove and rib-vaulted plaster ceiling. Some original panelled doors. For further details see J Hughes CWAAS, Trans.NS LXX, Perriam CWAAS, Trans.NS LXXVIII. Nisi Prius Courthouse - The Courts, English Street, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Formerly known as: The Citadel. Citadel, then Court House and court Offices, now County council Offices. 1542 by Stephen von Haschenperg with 1809-12 alterations and additions, by Thomas Telford and Sir Robert Smirke. Red sandstone ashlar on chamfered plinth with string courses, machicolated cornice (in part) and battlemented parapets. C20 greenslate roof on offices without chimneys and hipped lead roof on tower. Tower was formerly the Nisi Prius Court and is oval, the core being the former Citadel east tower, heightened and refaced in C19; clasping NW side is a 2-storey (internally 3 storeys) office block of 6 bays, with mock gate projection into English Street; all in Gothic style. The tower has tall 2-light windows in rounded deeply recessed chamfered arches, over small lancets and 2-light openings. Office block has left double plank doors in pointed Gothic arch; similar off-centre doorway projects in a battlemented porch, now fitted with a casement window. Ground floor 2-, 3- and 4-light stone mullioned windows above with central trefoil heads in pointed arches. Gate projection is basically an elongated passageway to the court; ends in 2 octagonal turrets flanking central arch under a cross vent; the side walls have been pierced by 2 pointed arches created in 1929 (formerly the pavement went round the turrets). Left return has windows similar to the main facade (some are C20) and blind statue niches. Rear has some C20 windows inserted. INTERIOR of tower retains its galleried semicircular court seating and judges bench (ceased to be used 1971). Ceiling replica replaced in 1980s renovation. Office block interior extensively altered. For further details see references on Crown Court description.

Hospital Wing of County Gaol and Gaol Wall, The Courts, English Street, Carlisle

Building Description

Hospital wing of County Gaol, now offices, and goal wall. 1824-7 by Christopher Hodgson. Red sandstone ashlar, extensively restored, with solid parapet, battlemented on the English Street facade. Flat lead roof. 2 storeys, numerous bays. Facing onto English Street is the gaol wall on chamfered plinth with regularly-placed blind lancets with single metal bar. On the top of the angle of the wall, public executions were performed and a cast plaque records the last one in 1862. The wall joins with the Crown Court offices and is an integral part of those offices. The rear of the wall has built against it the hospital wing. 2 off-centre former segmental-arched doorways are now infilled and fitted with casement windows in stone surrounds, some paired. INTERIOR alterations, but the solitary confinement cell is still complete with its iron door and peep hole, now used as a strong room. For further details see Perriam, CWAAS, Trans.NS. LXXVII. Building Description

Statue of James Steel. 1859 for the subscribers, by WF Woodington. Dalbeattie granite base and plinth surmounted by white marble figure. Square base with 4 angle granite bollards. Stepped plinth, the shaft inscribed JAMES STEEL MAYOR 1845 AND 1846, in 3 lines. Larger-than-life bare-headed figure in breeches and frock coat, holding a scrolled paper; heavily weathered, cleaned in 1989; left hand broken off when moved to its present location on 6 August 1989. Formerly erected in the Market Place, for further details see Carlisle Journal (1858 and 1859); the unveiling was illustrated in the Illustrated London News. James Steel was editor of the Carlisle Journal. William Frederick Woodington (1806-93) was a prominent C19 figure sculptor whose best known work is the bronze relief of the Battle of the Nile at the base of Nelson's Column in Trafalgar Square. (Carlisle Journal: 1 October 1858; Carlisle Journal: 18 March 1859).

St. Anns House, Etterby Scaur, Stanwix, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

House used as Judge lodgings. C1806 with 1830s or 1840s extensions. Cement-rendered wall on chamfered plinth (all dressings of painted stone); the extension with string course, eaves cornice and gabled pediment. Welsh slate roofs, rendered ridge chimney stacks. 2 storeys; the right 4 bays are part of the original house; the left 2 projecting bays are a later extension of higher roof line; extensive rear 2-storey extensions of numerous bays, making an overall L-shape. Original house has sash windows in stone surrounds, those on the upper floor with glazing bars; right canted 2-storey bay window has pilastered angles and a pent roof. the extension has a right glazed door and sidelights with glazing bars in a tripartite pilastered surround. Left bay projects even further with a pedimental gable; canted bay window; sash windows with glazing bars above this and door in stone surrounds. Rear right-angle extensions are of sandstone rubble; sash windows with glazing bars in stone surrounds. INTERIOR: panelled doors in panelled reveals; moulded plaster ceiling cornices in principal rooms and Adam-style marble fireplaces. Internal panelled shutters. Rear staircase under domed cupola has square wooden balusters and mahogany handrail; panelled soffit stair arch. HISTORY: there appears to have been no house on this site prior to 1806. It does not appear on Hodskinson & Donald's Map of Cumberland, surveyed 1770. It may be the house in Etterby Street referred to as being 'pleasantly situated on the banks of the Eden' advertised to left in the Cumberland Pacquet 26 April 1796. Charles James Graham married Ann Claeson at Stanwix Church on 1 January 1806. the Carlisle Journal, 15 July 1809, refers to Mr Graham of 'Anns Hill', so the house had been built by that date and would appear to be named in honour of his wife. CJ Graham died in 1847 and the house eventually passed to his niece (?) Fanny Eliza, who married in 1844, William wordsworth (son of the poet), and who lived there from 1857-70. Various owners until purchased by Carlisle City council in 1948, with the intended use as an old peoples home; never used for that purpose, it became the judge's lodgings. In the late 1980s acquired as part of the nearby Austin Friars, with a clause ensuring its continued use as judge's lodgings. The 'St' part of the house name first appeared in the 1858 Directory of Carlisle. (Carlisle Journal: 15 July 1809; Directory of Carlisle: 1858; Cumberland Pacquet; 26 April 1796).

Building Description

Shop. Early C19. Calciferous sandstone ashlar, rusticated on the ground floor with broad pilastered above and cornice. without roof or chimneys at the time of survey. Right panelled door and patterned overlight in prostyle Greek Doric porch with triglyph frieze. Round headed sash windows in stone surround with voussoirs, that on left converted to a doorway but now a window again. Sash windows with glazing bars above in plain reveals. Left return wall on St Mary's Gate (covered by adjoining building until the creation of this new street in 1925) has been re faced in 1989 in a composite stone to match the ground floor facade. INTERIOR not accessible at the time of survey. Some upper floor internal panelled shutters survive. Asquith;s Survey of 1853 shows this building as the Carlisle and Cumberland Bank: as this company was formed in 1837, this could be the construction date of the building. Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Includes: Nos 1-6 (consec) Market Arcade SCOTCH STREET. covered market. 1887-9 for Carlisle Corporation by Cawstone and Graham, ironwork manufactured by Cowans, Sheldon & Co, Engineers of Carlisle; extension of 1900-1. Coursed red sandstone with ashlar dressings. Internal and roof structure of cast-iron and wrought-iron and glass. A stone screen wall surrounds an iron structure of three parallel spans, the central span is larger and has a centered projection to the south west. There are full street frontages to Fisher Street, Market Street and West Tower Street, with an entrance arcade and smaller entrance on Scotch Street. In Renaissance style. Refurbished and altered 1989-91. FISHER STREET ELEVATIONS: the main entrance facade. Because of the restriction of the site the centre span of the hall comes forward to fisher Street behind a gable; 3 bays with further bay, formerly the Fish Market, at left, articulated by rusticated pilasters. Entrance central to gable, Corinthian columns in antis with animal head capitals, sheep and chicken on one, cow and pig on the other. Circular panel with city arms over. Flanking small mezzanine windows. Large cornice, panelled parapet and pediment gable. Left Fish Market entrance; both entrances has C20 glazed door in heavy panelled screens. MARKET STREET ELEVATION: 11 bays, ground falling away to left, additional projecting bay at right forms part of the fish Market. Right main doorway then 2 further doorways, 2 bays apart; large panelled screens with C20 modifications to doors; Corinthian columns in antis. Ramp giving access to left doors removed 1989. High triple casement windows divided by pilasters. Left bay has pedimented lower window. Fish Market has large central pedimented doorway with flanking side lights and roundels. WEST TOWER STREET ELEVATION: 2 storeys of 8 bays, with single-storey projection of 7 bays. Original entrance formerly at left-hand side now covered by a new single storey bay, added to the Poultry market which itself was an extension of 1900-1. The Corinthian columns from the original entrance now support a central pediment over the new market entrance on this elevation. Paired casement windows divided by pilasters. Behind and above are 3-light casements. The 3-arched roof span is directly behind a parapet. Set into the angle at right is the foundation stone dated 20 December 1887. A postcard photograph, taken before 1900, shows that there was originally a projecting columned loading bay on this side. SCOTCH STREET ELEVATION & NOS 1-6 (consec) MARKET ARCADE: arcade of 6 shops, 3 on each side, with manager's office and former caretaker's house above. Dated 1888 (now removed) by Cawstone and Graham; carved detail by Richard Nelson of Carlisle and Portrait head over arch by Mr Beale of Newcastle. red sandstone ashlar and solid parapet (a shaped pediment has been removed, see Perriam (1989). Slate roof; projecting gable ashlar chimney stacks. 3 storeys, 3 bays, 3-shops depth in plan. Central large through round and covered arch, with the keystone a portrait head of the Mayor JR Creighton. Flanking glazed shop windows within original rusticated pilasters, continuing along the returns of the arch. Casement windows above with upper glazing bars in kneed architraves, the central window with flanking blind panels. The additional Scotch Street entrance, approached along Old blue Bell Lane, retains its original scrolled wrought-iron folding gates, lettered and dated CARLISLE MARKET 1854 and additional 1889 date (with names of Mayors). INTERIOR: Behind the Fisher Street facade is the pediment and inscription for the Butter and Egg market of 1854, under which is an inscription of 2nd October 1889 for the completion and rebuilding. Inside altered 1990-1. Round archway to former cafe on Scotch Street elevation has carved stone lettering of 1889 COFFEE TAVERN. HISTORY: this site has been in use since 1799 for the butcher's market and was extended in 1854 by a butter and egg market (fish stalls were incorporated into the butcher's shambles). Further extensions were made in 1879. The present building was a complete rebuilding, incorporating a separate fish market. Plans for the new market of 1889 are in cumbria County Record Office CA/E1/273, 314, 328, 334 and 553. Plans for a proposed clock Tower in 1899, Ca/E1/989 and plans for the poultry market are Ca/E1/981/ (Perriam DR: Carlisle in Camera 2: 1989-: P.11)

Building Description

Quaker Meeting House, now shops with office above. Dated on relocated keystone 1776; extensions dated on facade keystone 1864 by James Stewart of Carlisle; further 1960s and 1980s internal alterations. Red brickwork on chamfered plinth (this and all dressings of calciferous sandstone), rusticated ashlar ground floor, sill band, solid brick and stone parapet with central stone panel. Hipped Welsh slate roof; no chimneys. 2 storeys, 5 bays; this 1864 facade is built over the former garden so that the original 1776 building, now partly knocked through, is behind. Central 3 bays project and are quoined; flanking bays are lower. 3 ground-floor round headed arches with false keystones, glazed as shop windows, the right arch being open. Similar smaller round arched windows on upper floor, the flanking windows are paired, with single windows to side bays. the open arch gives access to former original quoined surround doorway, now a through passageway(the dated keystone 1776 removed to the rear of the passage). INTERIOR has original exposed timber roof structure. HISTORY: the original Quaker Meeting House on this site collapsed in 1775 (records of Carlisle Monthly Meetings, 20 October 1775) and it had to be taken down in 1776. Its replacement was near completion in January 1777, lack of subscriptions holding up the progress. Original drawings for the 1776 building (not as built) and for the 1864 alterations are in Cumbria County record office, CA/E4/873. sold by the Friends in 1962 when new Meeting House was built. As the Kinmont Meeting Room (cafe), this retained some of the original panelling until 1988. See DM Butler (1978). Entrance Gate Piers of Cumberland Infirmary, Infirmary Street, Carlisle

Building Description

Gate piers and wall. Probably early 1930s. Brick wall partly on chamfered plinth (all dressings of calciferous sandstone) with stone cornice and coping; tall squared piers with stepped caps and urn finials; patterned cast- and wrought iron work between piers originally supported gate (now missing). Wall right of the gate is higher and links with main hospital building, with an additional pedestrian gate; the left wall starts at same height but is stepped down to a lower level. Previously there was an entrance with a long drive from Newtown Road: this new entrance would seem to be part of the 1930s work when an extra storey was added to main building. Continuation of the plain brick wall down Infirmary Street is not of interest. Wall is included for group value only.

Roof, not visible from ground, is of slate with skylights; detached chimney is listed separately. Large 7-storey, 22-bay factory with 5-bay returns; lower left single-bay return engine house and 2-storey, 7-bay boiler house; built with fireproof floors. Junction Street facade; at each end bays project slightly for full height. Regularly spaced casement windows which are C20, in original stone surround with hood cornices. The right return has projecting central 3 bays; the last bay on the right is for loading and has enlarged loading doorways (probably original). the left return has many blind windows. Engine house has large casement window with glazing bars in stone architrave and dentilled cornice. Boiler house has casement windows similar to the main factory. Rear of boiler house has plank doors under Diocletian windows, some with original radial glazing bars. INTERIOR of factory has off-centre stone stair around lift shaft (could be later insertion). Cast-iron pillars support girders and brick vaulted ceilings; floor tiles are stamped R. ASHTON 7 CO. BUCKLEY (Flintshire). Carlisle Journal (1835) records the laying of the foundations. the boilers were installed in April and May 1836, Carlisle Journal (1836). For illustration see Pevsner (1967); however he incorrectly gives Robert Tattersall as the architect.

Currock Community Centre, Lediard Avenue, Currock, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

House now community centre. Early C19. Calciferous ashlar on chamfered plinth, with string course, cornice and solid parapet. Hipped graduated greenslate roof; ashlar ridge chimney stacks. 2 storeys, symmetrical 3 bays with 2-bay returns and rear lower 2-store, 2-bay domestic range, double-depth, central-stair plan. Central panelled door and patterned overlight in enclosed pilastered porch. Sash windows with glazing bars in plain stone reveals and recessed aprons, the side window bays projecting slightly. Right return has canted ashlar bay windows; upper floor windows same as facade. Lean-to outbuildings on the left return and rear 1937 extensions. INTERIOR has rounded stair arch with incised Greek Key design and panelled soffit. Stone staircase has patterned cast-iron balusters and moulded wooden handrail; large round-headed stair window. Replacement doors in moulded wooden architraves; panelled shutters, but in some rooms these are probably only panelled reveals. Principal rooms have marble fireplaces with cast-iron insets and grates; moulded plaster cornices to ceilings. HISTORY: A house on this site called 'Cuddick' (the old name for Currock) is shown on Greenwoods Map of Cumberland, 1823. The Carlisle Journal (1934), suggests a 'late Georgian' date and Robert Cowen of 'Currick' is listed in Pigot & Co's 1828-9 Directory, but the Cumberland News (1984) gives 1842 as its building date; however, it would appear that the property called 'Currick' on the 1841 census is this house, occupied by William Carruthers and his wife Sarah. Estate was purchased by the City Council for new housing in 1932 and stables partially demolished to provide stone for the extension of Eden Bridge. In 1934 it became a community centre and for a short period was the YHA hostel for Carlisle. (Carlisle Journal: 5 October 1934; Pigot and co.: Directory: 1828-1829; Cumberland News: 28 September 1984).

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

House now club. Early 1830s for Elizabeth Dacre. Calciferous sandstone ashlar facade (other walls of brick) chamfered plinth, cornice and solid parapet. Graduated greenslate roof with dormer windows; C19 end brick chimney stacks. 2 storeys, 3 bays, double-depth, left stair plan. Steps up to central in antis doorway under overall radial fanlight. Sash window above with glazing bars in stone architrave; small patterned bowed cast-iron balcony. flanking full-height bowed bays with triple sash windows and glazing bars in stone surrounds. INTERIOR has moulded plaster ceiling cornices with roundels. False ceilings on ground floor may conceal further plasterwork. Original staircase has scrolled wrought-iron balusters and moulded wooden handrail. Many original panelled doors in panelled reveals with eared architraves. HISTORY: see Robert Fell (1981). He dates the house to c1840, but as Mrs Dacre lived on English Street and sold that house in 1831 (Carlisle Journal 1831), this would seem to be the date she moved into the new house. Brown (1951) says 'Mrs Dacre's 3 houses in Lowther Street, one of which in that with the bow windows, was constructed purposely for her to give entertainments in and had a huge drawing room running from front to back.' Includes: No.72 SCOTCH STREET. Includes: Nos 1-7 ST ALBANS ROW. former town hall with shops beneath. 1668-9 (on the site of the medieval town hall), with 1717 and C19 alterations and additions. Painted stucco walls on chamfered plinth, red sandstone eaves cornice and solid parapet. 1717 extension is of red sandstone ashlar with V-jointed quoins (all dressings of calciferous sandstone) and eaves cornice; early C19 extension is of stucco (over brick) with ground floor pilasters and rusticated ashlar. Graduated greenslate roofs, partly hipped; coped with kneelers on higher early C19 extension, with vents and bellcote on central part and clock tower cupola on 1717 extension. Panted stucco ridge chimney stacks. Central oldest part is 2 storeys, 7 bays; right-angle right 1717 extension of same height has 2 projecting bays on the main facade and a 5-bay return which is No.72 Scotch Street; higher 3-storey single-bay early C19 extension at left; the shops at the rear are Nos 1, 3, 5 & 7 St Albans Row; forms an overall L-shape. Central external serpentine stone steps to upper floor council chamber (added c1825, replacing C17 steps) of 2 flights and are of red sandstone ashlar with round and squared piers and speared railings; segmental arch under stairs originally gave access to lock up cells; above are double plank doors in stone architrave under a pediment with the city arms and ball finial. Ground floor C19 and C20 shop windows; upper floor sash windows in C19 stone architraves (c1825) replacing cross-mullioned windows). The bell and bellcote are an 1886 replacement after a fire. The right extension has a panel n the main facade giving the city arms, name of Mayor and date of 1717 in roman numerals; this and the Scotch Street facade have C20 ground-floor shop windows and sash windows in stone architraves above. At the right a segmental through archway gives access from Scotch Street to St Albans Row. Clock tower on this extension is also of 1717, with clock faces on 3 sides (originally with just an hour hand) and ball and weather vane finial. The left extension has C19 ground-floor windows; sash windows above, those on the main facade in stone architraves. The rear, facing St Albans Row, has ground floor casements windows and half glazed doors, restored in 1987 to their 1835 appearance; one upper floor window, now partly blocked, was re-exposed in 1987 to show this is one of the original 1669 cross-mullioned windows; other half-dormers were added in 1867. INTERIOR: the council chamber has C19 wooden panelling; where the main trusses have been cut away, carved city coat-of-arms have been added; art of the panelled seating survives. Other rooms have ribbed plaster ceilings and C19 panelled doors. HISTORY: the original contract for the town Hall dated 1668 is in Cumbria County Record Office and an extract from the council minutes for 23 July 1669 shows the work was carried out; in Cumbria County Record Office is a voucher for a model to be made for the new Town Hall in 1716 (Ca/2/3); thee are also vouchers for the old and new halls in 1732-3 (Ca/Vouchers/1732-3); a lithograph showing the Town Hall as it appeared in c1780 is in M Nutter (1835); a watercolour of 1788 (Jackson Collection) shows that the left extension did not exist then, but is is shown on an oil painting by william Brown of 1825; there is also a contract for alterations dated 4 may 1825 (Ca/5/1/50). Details of the 1867 alterations are given in Carlisle Journal (1867). Details on the history are given in trans. CWAAS, NS XC. Building Description

Wall, railings and piers for Cattle market, now around Sports Centre car park. Probably 1895. Low chamfered sandstone wall with chamfered coping, surmounted by heavy cast-iron speared railings, each alternate rail has a speared ball finial, with interval columns. Red sandstone piers, those at the gateless gateway reduced in height; squared shaft with round moulded angles, on moulded base and modillioned segmental capitals. HISTORY: The Sands were a series of islands between the 2 channels of the river Eden which were used for a cattle market from medieval times. A new market was laid out in 1816 and in 1895 this was contracted and railed in. It continued in use as a market into the 1950s, but became a car park and in the 1980s a Sports Centre was built on the site. Carlisle Journal (1894) states that the contract for the railings was let to Messrs Raybold & Co of Workington for £1,112,4s. However, in 1895, The Lion Foundry Co Ltd supplied railings for the Cattle market, Cumbria County Record Office (Ca/C7/Box20). A photograph of 1898 shows these railings in position, see Perriam (1988). See under Bridgewater for another section of these railings. Hallway has fluted Ionic columns and (1846?) cantilever stone staircase with patterned wrought-iron balusters and moulded wooden handrail. Panelled doors, some in panelled reveals and in moulded wooden architraves. Hall and principal ground-floor rooms have elaborate moulded plaster ceilings; modillioned cornices, roundel and radiating sectional panels; black and white marble fireplaces, one with carved details. Panelled internal shutters to each window. Alcove with segmental arch on console brackets. The house name comes from Richard Coledale, a merchant who lived here in the reign of Henry VI, but it had been called Harrington Houses. See Carlisle Journal (1810) for laying of foundation stone of present house; Carlisle Journal (1846) records the internal alterations. Became St Mary's Home for Friendless Girls in 1926 and now Health Authority Office. Left link wall and stable range, now No.96, are only included to preserve the carriage archway, which is contemporary with the facade of Coledale Hall. (Carlisle Journal: 26 May 1810; Carlisle Journal: 28 February 1846).

Building Description

House, now doctors' residence for hospital. 1820s with early C20 alterations. Califerous sandstone ashlar on chamfered plinth, with sill band, cornice and solid parapet. Greenslate mansard roof; ashlar end chimney stacks, 2 storeys, 3 bays, with lower single-bay flanking wings. Central panelled door and patterned radial fanlight, up steps, in pilastered open pedimented doorcase. Sash windows with glazing bars in stone reveals. Three C20 boxed casement dormers. Wings have Venetian windows, those on ground floor (originally doorways) with blind side lights. Interior has C20 doors in fluted wooden architraves and internal panelled shutters. Moulded plaster ceiling cornices and round arched niche in principal room. Staircase in right wing. Thomas McAdam lived here in 1828; it became the House of Recovery in 1847. Photographs show that the mansard roof was added in early C20. The date of 1820 given on the previous listing is suspect, as this was the date of the founding of the House of Recovery (Fever Hospital). Has group value with the Cumberland Infirmary nearby. Not to be confused with Crozier Lodge on Clift Street which is C20.

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Houses now offices and showroom. 1829, for John Fawcett, attorney, with late C19 extensions. Calcareous sandstone ashlar on chamfered plinth, with string course, cornice and solid parapet. Graduated slate roofs with one gabled dormer; ashlar ridge and gable chimney stacks. Overall rough L-shape elongated by extension. Original house is 2 storeys; entrance facade 2 bays and garden front 4 bays; 3-storeys, 4-bay extension adjoins at left rear. Entrance facade has off-centre Gothic ribbed panelled doors in pointed chamfered surround with pointed side lights under heraldic shields; 5light overlight of coloured heraldic glass under hoodmould. Casement windows divided into 2-lights by glazing bars, in chamfered surrounds under hoodmoulds. Garden front has off-centre full height canted bay window, flanked by gabled parapets; casement windows with glazing bars under hoodmoulds; small blind lancets in gables. Right bay has narrow French window and casement above under hoodmould. Rear has similar windows to garden front and gabled parapet. Extension has 2- and 3-light stone mullioned windows and a prominent bay window on the entrance facade. INTERIOR: complete and Gothic except for Jacobean carved wooden fireplaces in hall and front room. Stone stair arches and panelled dado in hall and stairs; wooden staircase has fretted rails and moulded wooden handrail; hexagonal newels with shaped caps. Heraldic 2-light stained glass stair window, incorporating the city and Fawcett arms. Ribbed panelled doors with elaborate brass knobs and fingers plates in wooden architraves. Drawing room has columned window arch and corresponding blind arch on wall opposite; gothic ribbed panelled shutters in 2 parts. White marble ribbed and columned fireplace. Rib and petal moulded plaster ceiling in radial design around central roundel. HISTORY: Carlisle Journal (1829) records the theft of tools from a workman 'now working on the new building erecting by John Fawcett at Petteril Bank'. This date is confirmed by the local directories which show that John Fawcett was living in the Crescent, Carlisle in 1829, but in 1834 was of Petteril Bank. At this period Rickman was working on a number of projects around the city; Holy Trinity Church and Christ Church 1828; Devonshire Street Reading Rooms 1830; Brunstock House and Scaleby Castle c1830 and Rose Castle 1829-1834 and it is possible he could have been the architect. For details on John Fawcett see his obituary on Carlisle Patriot (1833) and C Roy Huddleston and RS Bournemouth, (1978). From 1909 the owner was Lady Gillford, daughter of the 12th Earl Home (aunt of Alec Douglas Home), hence the name Gillford Park nearby. For further details and illustrations see Parish Observer April (1982). After her death in 1951 the house was acquired by County Council. (Carlisle Journal: 14 November 1829; Carlisle Patriot: 27 July 1883: P.4; Huddleston, C Roy: Cumberland Families and Heraldry: 1978-: P.108; Parish Observer (Parish of St John, Upperby), April 1982).

Includes: No. 4 ALFRED STREET NORTH. Includes: No.3 BRUNSWICK STREET. 7 houses now offices. Late 1860s or early 1870s. Calciferous sandstone ashlar on chamfered plinth, with raised quoins, sill band and stone-bracketed metal gutter; left return of red brick, right return of white glazed brick and stone dressings. Graduated greenslate roof, No.1 Portland Square with gable dormers; Nos 2-5 Portland Square with continuous C20 box dormers, slate hung. Main facade 2 storeys, alternating 3- and 2-bay houses; 3-bay houses on returns. Panelled doors, some partly glazed and overlights, within prostyle Tuscan porches. The 3-bay houses have flanking bay windows; No.5 is more ornate with round headed lights in pilastered surrounds with large false keystones, the bay having quoins and sill brackets. 2-bay houses have canted bay windows. Sash windows above in stone architraves, some of them eared. Left return is No.3 Brunswick Street, of similar details to the facade but brick instead of ashlar. Right return is No.4 Alfred Street North, of similar details to the facade but white brick instead of ashlar. INTERIORS have some office conversions, but most have panelled doors and moulded plaster ceiling cornices and central plaster roundels in principal rooms. The plans for No.3 by C & J Armstrong, dated 7 January 1867, are in Cumbria County Record Office, Ca/E4/762; however, the plans differ slightly from what was built.

Building Description

Public House. Designed 1928, and constructed 1929-30, with C20 alterations, By Harry Redfern for the Carlisle & District State Management Scheme. Tudor Gothic style. Buff coursed ashlar sandstone walling and dressings with coped gables, tall ashlar gable chimneys and slate roof covering.

Plan

Three ground floor bars, arranged behind one another, and 2 first floor bars approached by a separate entrance and stair from the street.

Exterior - Front Elevation

Symmetrical three-bays front of three storeys with a central attic. Ground floor with doorways to each side, each with four-centred arched heads and mould surrounds below four-light traceried over lights. Between the doorways, a five-light mullioned and transomed window below a continuous string course. Above, central first floor canted oriel window with mullioned and transomed lights below carved traceried panels. Flanking the oriel are narrow transomed lights, and beyond those, tall two-light mullioned and transomed windows. Second floor with wide five-light mullioned window with hood mould to centre with flanking two-light windows to outer bays. Tall, steeply pitched coped gable above with lozenge-shaped attic window. Hopper heads dated 1929; down pipes with delicately detailed chain patterns.

Interior

Consistent interior detailing used to create an Old English style. All rooms retain hearths with sub-Tudor detailing and tiled panels, large cased spine beams, and rectangular fielded panelling to two-thirds height. Panelled corridor with bell pushes and doors to front bar. Hatch to servery enlarged late C20. Behind this room, a large Public Bar with two large, square piers in front of the servery, the latter brought forward and extended to the north late C20. Behind another bar, originally planned as a week-end only room. Two first floor bars retain contemporary bar counters and rear shelving. Hearth surround to rear bar dated 1930 and similar to that in quality to ground floor examples. Front bar with two hearths, one dated 1930 and similar to that in back bar; both fireplaces with texts in gold letters, that to the south wall a quotation from Omar Khayyam, and that to the north wall quotations by Robert Burns and G K Chesterton, all in praise of alcoholic drink. Above the panelling painted car touches with vine motifs and, over the fireplaces, jugs and glasses. The least altered of the surviving public houses designed by Harry Redfern for the Carlisle State Management Scheme and displaying high quality and carefully executed interior design characteristics, by means of which the scheme sought to demonstrate the civilized and decent nature of its new premises.

Building Description

A pair of semi-detached houses. 1896, believed to be by George Dale Oliver, for himself and Francis Robertson, the latter's part extended 1900 to the designs of Charles J Ferguson. Smooth red brick with ashlar sandstone dressings and half-timbered detailing to gable apexes. Reduced side wall and ridge chimneys and slate roof coverings.

Exterior

Near symmetrical original front elevation of two storeys with attics, with central doorway enclosed by late Ctwo0 gabled porch. Wide advanced outer gables with paired sash windows to each floor, the openings with ashlar lintels and cills. Chamfered corners, the right hand part with two-light mullioned window in the angle. Inner bays with canted two storeyed bay windows, the left-hand one built against the inner return of the gable. Above these, gabled dormers, with half-timbered detailing to match that of the main gables. Right hand return with narrow sashed lights, and a projecting chimney breast, now truncated just above eaves level. Further right, main doorway to right hand house, with three panel door, the panels reeded, within ashlar surround, and with shallow arched head incorporating rectangular overlight with three cusped lights beneath a stepped hoodmould. Further right, flanking lanced with blind cusping to lintel, and a pair of coupled ground floor sashes. Lower two storey L-shaped extension to left-hand house obscures much of its return elevation. Set-back gable to front with quoins and coped gable. Wide, off centre doorway with moulded stone surround and semi-circular arched head with hood mould and flanking rectangular lights. Six panel door with integral fanlight. Above, shallow storey band forms part of moulded storey band, set below four-light transomed window to right-side of gable. Side elevation with asymmetrical gable incorporating wide canted bay window with transomed lights and two and three-light first floor mullioned windows beneath a drip mould. Further left, narrow quoined doorway with part glazed panelled door at junction of storeyed range and single storeyed, flat-roofed part with further canted bay window and balustraded parapet.

Interior

The sub-division of the houses into flats has brought consequential modifications to the original plan form, but much original interior fabric survives, including joinery and plasterwork. The added wing is little altered and retains much of the interior detailing shown in the original drawings, including wall panelling, panelled doors and surrounds, moulded ceiling beams, leaded lights and stained glass and decorative tile-work.

History

The pair of houses are attributed to George Dale Oliver, who occupied the right-hand side, and who later became County Architect for Cumberland. The addition to the left-hand part was designed by Charles J Ferguson, a pupil of Scott, who later worked with J A Cory.

Flemish bond brickwork with light headers, on chamfered plinth (all dressings of painted stone) with V-jointed quoins and bracketed cornice carried round the left return. Hipped graduated greenslate roof without chimneys. 3 storeys, single bay extending to rear; long narrow building of double depth. Early C20 door and shop window on ground floor under overall signboard on carved wooden brackets. Tripartite window above and Venetian window on 2nd floor, both in stone surrounds and 2nd floor window with bracketed sill. Plain brick right return faces onto Longcakes Lane. left return, facing onto East Tower Street, has 2 sash windows, with glazing bars, one above the other, at the left, in brick reveals. Evidence of ground-floor windows infilled with brick. INTERIOR not inspected. HISTORY: Although this is at the end of the present Scotch Street and this house would be expected to be No.1. originally the street extended 'without' the city as far as Drovers Lane where Rickergate started. The reason was that the city boundary was marked by the ditch and when this was infilled the boundary remained outside the walls. For the restoration of the buildings, with illustrations, see Cumberland News (1981). (Cumberland News: 12 June 1981: P.14).

Terrace of 5 houses. Late 1860s or early 1870s. English bond brickwork (one house painted) on chamfered plinth (all dressings of red sandstone) with stone bracketed metal gutter. Welsh slate roof; shared ridge red brick chimney stacks with cream brick bands. 2 storeys, 2 bays each, of double-depth plan; the 2 left houses having a bigger roof line because of the fall of ground on a hill. Each house has a right panelled door and overlight in prostyle Ionic porches up steps. Sash windows, some with modern frames and an inserted canted bay window. INTERIORS not inspected. These houses do not appear on the 1865 OS map; but as No.1 Thornton Road, round the corner, was being built in 1871, these houses had perhaps been built by then.

Building Description

9 houses, now 8 shops with offices above. Early C19 of 2 periods, with later alterations. Flemish bond brickwork, the earliest part with V-jointed quoins, partly painted. Graduated greenslate roof; original ridge brick chimney stacks. Built in two phases; 6 houses and 3 houses divided by quoins. 3 storeys, 2 bays each, except those over through archways which are of 3 bays, all forming one continuous crescent. First phase has central archway on quoined surround. Ground floor is now all C20 shop fronts. Sash windows above in painted stone surrounds and smaller attic windows. Second phase has been made to look identical, but without quoins and has a right archway with brick reveals. INTERIORS not inspected. HISTORY: A tour of the city c1820 mentions the houses in the Crescent. John Woods' Map of Carlisle 1821 shows the first phase complete; newspaper references suggest that the second phase could have been under construction in 1824. An 1870s photograph shows the second phase as only 2 storeys; by 1899 these had been raised to 3 storeys. Perriam (1988) shows a photograph of 1899 showing these buildings when they were private houses. (Perriam DR: Carlisle in Camera: 1988-: P.37).

Statue of Earl of Lonsdale, The Crescent, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Statue. 1846 for the subscribers, signed M L WATSON, SCULPTOR. Calciferous sandstone base, plinth and shaft; white marble figure. Rusticated square base and plinth; shaft inscribed at front in six lines WILLIAM EARL OF LONSDALE, LORD LIEUTENANT OF CUMBERLAND AND WESTMORLAND FROM 1802 TO 1844. Larger-than-life figure dressed on robe and costume of the Order of the Garter. A competition for the statue was held on 1845. Its original location was in English Street between the Courthouses, where the foundation stone was laid in 1846, but because of a dispute it was not erected until a year later, (see Carlisle Journal 1845, 6 and 7). A photograph of the statue being moved on 25 July 1929 is in Cumberland News, 19 September 1986. It was placed in its present location in the Courthouse Gardens in 1930. For an illustration of the statue and details of the sculptor, see Marshall Hall (1979). (Carlisle Journal: 8 March 1845; Carlisle Journal: 24 October 1846; Carlisle Journal: 13 August 1847; Cumberland News: 19 September 1986; Marshall Hall: The Artist of Cumbria: 1979-: P.93).

Statue of Queen Victoria, Bitts Park, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Also known as: Statue of Queen Victoria BITTS PARK. Statue of Queen Victoria. 1902 by Sir Thomas Brock RA. Unpolished light-coloured granite ashlar bronze. Set on broad granite steps is a moulded and chamfered plinth with square shaft which has bronze panels depicting EMPIRE EDUCATION, SCIENCE AND ART, COMMERCE (all signed by sculptor); surmounted by standing figure of Victoria in state robes. Inscription on front of plinth gives details of Victoria and her reign; rear inscription records the names of those subscribing to costs of the panels. For illustration of unveiling see Perriam (1989). this statue is identical to one erected by the same sculptor at Brighton and Hove. Sir Thomas Brock was one of the more prominent late Victorian sculptors who did a large number of statues of Queen Victoria (pre-eminently the Victoria Memorial, The Mall, London. (Perriam DR: Carlisle in Camera 2: 1989-: P.22).

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

House now office. Late 1830s probably by John Hodgson of Carlisle. Calciferous sandstone ashlar on moulded plinth, with string course, cornice and central parapet panel ending in scrolled brackets. Graduated slate roof with coped gables; rebuilt end and ridge brick chimney stacks. 2 storeys, symmetrical 5 bays; double-depth plan. Central panelled door and overlight, up steps, in prostyle Ionic porch. Sash windows with glazing bars in plain stone reveals over recessed aprons. Small cellar vents openings under ground-floor windows. Window over entrance is larger in stone architrave, with console-bracketed cornice. INTERIOR has paneled doors in painted wooden architraves; panelled internal shutters to each front window. Stone stairs with patterned cast-iron balusters and moulded wooden handrail. Principal rooms have moulded plaster ceiling cornices and roundels; stone fireplaces. The 1841 census shows that Robert Bental, attorney, lived on this house and this and the house opposite, No.2 (qv), were then the only houses on the street. As Robert Bental lived in Devonshire Street in 1837 (Carlisle Directory) and was probably the first person to line in the new house, a date between 1837-41 can be established for construction.

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Terrace of 8 houses, now offices. Late 1840s, early 1850s and early 1880s. Calciferous sandstone ashlar on moulded plinth with string course, cornice and dwarf solid parapet. Graduated slate roof, one house with dormer; shared ridge brick chimney stacks. 2 storeys, 3 bays each, except No.17 which has 4th bay over carriage arch. Right and left paired doorways, up steps, have panelled doors and overlights in prostyle Ionic porches. Sash windows, some with glazing bars in plain stone reveals over recessed aprons. Some houses have cellar windows and cast-iron railed voids but others appear not to have cellars. No.17 has left segmental carriage arch with railed gates. INTERIORS not inspected. This terrace and the one opposite have been carefully matched with the earlier individual houses No.1 and No.2, so that they appear of one build. No.1 and 2 are the only houses in the street listed in the 1847 (Mannix and Whellan) Directory, but by the 1851 Census the street ended at No.7. the 1873 Directory (Kelly's) still shows the street ending at No.7, but in the 1880 Directory (Arthur's No.9 had been built. Nos 11-17 appear for the first time in the 1884 Directory (Barnes Moss). J Cornforth, Country Life (1978), illustrates and refers to this as 'the best late-classical street' in the city, but he queries the date of construction, hence the above notes. Nos 13, 15 & 17 were listed on 13.11.72. (Country Life: 11 May 1978: P.1331/2).

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

City boundary stone. 1830s or 1840s. Calciferous sandstone. Square stone with flattened top set into the ground. Inscribed on 2 faces C.C. (City of Carlisle) and on another face DIXON (the then Mayor); the lettering is partly cut away by angle flanking. The only surviving boundary stone of this period when the city boundary was extended to the south bank of the River Eden. As leave was sought by the city to mark the boundary on Eden Bridge on 1836 (Carlisle Journal 2 July 1836) it is possible that this stone was erected during the Mayoral office of Peter Dixon in 1838; however, a number of members of the Dixon family were Mayors up to 1853. The stone appears in this position on the 1865 OS map of the city.

City wall, mews stable, warehouses and school; now theatre, public house, amusement arcade and disco. Early C12 city wall, 1813 school, late C19 mews and 1980s public house, etc. these later buildings in themselves are not of interest but are listed to protect the city wall behind them. the front wall of each building on the West Walls facade being built on top of the west city walls. Robert Smirke suggested that buildings could be built against the walls when he advised on the building of the Central School; see correspondence in Cumbria County REcord Office, Ca/2/209/76 and Ca/5/3/39, and conveyance of the School 1919-20 as St Cuthbert's Parish Hall (the school closed 31 August 1909) Ca/5/2/40. That the city wall exists behind these buildings was confirmed by work done by the Carlisle Archaeological Unit in recording the structure when 'Legends' and 'Big Softies' were extended in 1985. For the through-archway and chamber behind the wall, thought to be the sewerage outlet for Blackfriars Convent, now within the Green Room Theatre, see W Hutchinson (1794); Carlisle Journal (1929); and Lysons Magna Britannia: Cumberland (1816), for drawings of the chamber. This stretch of city walls does not form part of the Scheduled Ancient Monument of the remaining exposed West Walls, but is a continuation of it. Graduated Welsh slate roof, partly hipped; C19 red sandstone gable chimney stack. Single-storey, single-bay original school, has single-bay extension, then 4-bay extension, all in one row. Car-park facade has oldest part at left; large 5-light stone mullioned window with curved head and hoodmould. This and the 1832 extension have facing gables; 1832 extension has a 3-light cross-mullioned window. 1851 extension has C20 left door in original lean-to porch, dated on carved ribbon over entrance. Further bays are set back with 2-light stone mullioned windows and C20 right door in C20 surround. Left return wall has C20 mullioned windows to match the C19 ones. West Walls facade has stone-mullioned windows those to right being C20. INTERIOR not inspected. The Grammar School was of royal foundation and formed part of the Cathedral, hence within the Cathedral grounds, on the site of the former malt kiln of the Priory of St Mary. Became the Choir of the Cathedral when a new Grammar School was built in 1883. Threatened with demolition in 1977, but converted to its present use shortly afterwards. A plan of 1827 in Cumbria Record Office (D & C 2/1) shows that the 1806 Grammar School was demolished to make way for the 1832 rebuilding. Included for group value and historical interest.

Building Description

Tithe barn for the Priory of St Mary. For Prior Gondibour c1470s, with C19 alterations and 1969-71 restoration. Squared blocks of red sandstone (some with masons marks). Graduated sandstone flag roof with one coped gable. 7 1/2 bays, single storey except for the last, westernmost bay which is now 2-storey. The north side was probably open originally, and consisted of large timber posts supporting the roof trusses. A small section of the later sandstone infill has survived. The south elevation fronting onto Heads Lane is a 3ft 7ins thick sandstone wall with 8 slit vents with wide splayed reveals on the inside. In 1824 the two eastern bays of the barn were converted for use as the Carlisle Dispensary and a doorway and window were inserted in this wall. These openings were blocked in red sandstone during the C20 restoration. the eastern gable wall has a 2-light cusped-headed window and a blocked C19 window beneath. In 1875 the west bay and gable were in danger of collapse and were dismantled. This part of the Tithe Barn has now been reconstructed in painted concrete blocks, into 2 storeys containing kitchen and cloakrooms. INTERIOR retains its massive oak roof trusses which are supported on timber posts. the posts on the south side are built against the sandstone wall and are supported by sandstone corbels which are about one third of the way up the wall. There are large concave braces from these posts to the underside of the tie-beams. In addition on the north side there are similar braces from the posts to the wall plate. Only 6 of the 7 trusses survive and these have king posts with 2 parallel struts to each side from the tie to the principal rafter. Also parallel to the struts are braces from the king post to the rafter. some of the king posts still retain concave braces from the post to the ridge piece. 3 rows of purlins. Building Description

City walls. C12 with extensive rebuilding and refacing of 1746, 1876-7, 1985, 1988-9. Squared block of red sandstone with some calciferous sandstone (some re-used Roman Stone), partly with chamfered plinth and partly battered. Gently curving wall which projects at its northern end, built against a river terrace as a retaining wall; the West Walls street is at the higher level behind and the pavement forms the parapet walk along the wall. The northern projection was rebuilt or refaced in 1876-7, when the nearby railway was re-aligned; set into the end of this part of the wall is the inscription stone WEST WALLS. Off-centre external stone steps to the Town Dyke Orchard were added on 1883; the parapet between the steps and the projection was rebuilt in new red sandstone in 1985. Further south a number of buildings were constructed against the wall and these were demolished in 1988; the wall behind needed partial rebuilding and this was done with red sandstone from the demolished buildings. The foundation stone from each demolished building was incorporated. THE FAWCETT SCHOOLS (dated 1851 in Roman numerals); the mayor and date 1879 for the police station extension; recording the restoration, a stone with the mayor's name and date 1988, the unveiling was on 21 April 1989. At southern end of the exposed wall are the Sallyport steps which are added c1813 and nearby is the medieval sallyport opening, now merely an arched recess. Statutory Reference: 671-1/05/00322 Grade: II Delisted Date:

Location Address

Waverley Viaduct, Willow Holme Industrial Estate, Willow Home, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Also known as: Waverly Viaduct. Newtown. Disused railway viaduct for the former Carlisle to Edinburgh line. 1861 for the North British Railway Company. Quarry-faced red sandstone blocks with brick arches. Double-track width of 6 spans crossing the River Eden on a slight curve. Each arch is segmental on rounded piers with quarry-faced voussoirs. Arch soffits are of brick. Moulded string course and solid parapet with chamfered coping; parts of the parapet have stones missing through vandalism. Concern was expressed in the Carlisle Journal 15 January 1861 that the wooden bridge, constructed to carry a tramway for the building of this bridge, would be damaged by ice floes on the river. The line was completed in April 1862. Waverly Viaduct is partly in Kingmoor CP. In Peter Brook (1990) this is called the Canal Viaduct. (Carlisle Journal: 16 January; Carlisle Journal: 1 April 1862; Brook, Peter: Calling Carlisle Control: 1990-: P.80-81).

Statutory Reference: 671-1/1/10002 Grade: II Delisted Date:

Location Address

The Redfern Public House, Kingmoor Road, Carlisle CA3 9PS

Building Description

Public House. 1939-40 by Redfern & Seddon for the Carlisle and District State Management Scheme.

Materials

Read brick ground floor and mostly read tile-hung on first floor. Red tile roofs. Red brick front wall and mid-roof stacks.

Plan

Large public bar on left. To right two further bars radiating from a former circular hall. Single storey verandah in the angle of the rear walls overlooking a bowling green.

Exterior

Front has seven bays. Roughly symmetrical facade with a shallow, two storeyed canted bay window under a gable to each side, and between single storey with three dormers under hipped gables breaking the eaves. Bay windows have identical casement fenestration on ground and first floor, chiefly distinguished by a two light central opening under a semi-circular head and with margin and spandrel lights. Two/two dormer casement windows. Prominent stack between the left hand bay tapering as it rises and terminating in three grouped square chimneys. Two entrances with shallow flat canopies with enriched lead work, between three light casement window. Single storey end bays under cat slide roofs.

Rear

Nine bays. Symmetrical elevation. Side bays each with a door under a cat slide roof. Next to these two storey, slightly projecting bays with four, three casements on the ground floor and three light casements on the upper floor. Timber verandah linking these bays with a range of rectangular windows and a timber balustrade over, some bays of which have vertical railing, others diagonal members. In the centre of the first floor a two light multi-paned window under a plain gable; either side two, two/two casements beneath hipped gables; all these windows break through the eaves line. Small cupola centrally placed on the roof ridge. Timber rail between the building and the bowling green.

Interior

Public bar with two thirds height timber panelling with reeded detail. Bar counter moved and altered late C20. Right hand front bar is the former Smoking Room. Retains two thirds height fielded panelling and the tiled fire surround. Behind this the former Tea and Smoking Room with similar panelling and tiled fire surround. Within the verandah a serving hatch for service to the bowling green area. The sixteenth and last public house built before the Second World War under the Carlisle and District State Management Scheme and, with its carefully detailed architecture and provision for bowling, expressing the ideals of civilised public house culture that the scheme sought to impact. It was the last public house in which Henry Redfern, the scheme's architect, was involved and it was therefore named after him.

Location Address

Pippins, Lowther Street, Carlisle, CA3 8EQ

Building Description

Alternatively known as: Pippins, Lowther Street. Public House. 1925 with late C20 alterations. By Harry Redfern, architect for the State Management Scheme in Carlisle ('The Carlisle Undertaking'). Red brick with sandstone and terracotta dressings, and a Lake District slate roof covering.

Plan

U-shape, with small rear yard now infilled.

Exterior - Front Elevation

East: Two storey and attics, five-bay front with end bays expressed as slightly advanced towers of three storeys. Ground floor entrance frontage with double doorways to outer and central bays, the latter flanked by large square window openings with tripartite frames. Either side of the windows are double pilasters rising from a deep plinth, supporting a frieze, all of pale terracotta, as are the door surrounds of the doorways to the end towers. First floor with five tall mullion and transom windows with ashlar aprons and lintels which form part of an eaves band to the central three bays, below a mansard roof with three, three-light wedge dormer windows. Gablets to tower heads each with five-light mullioned window within ashlar walling.

Side Elevation

South: Separate side entrances to former mixed and women's bars, the former two-bays wide and two storeys, the latter lower and with a pedimented door head.

Interior

Ground floor altered and remodelled with late C20 bar counter and back bar, in central island location of original. First floor retains original plan form with central bar counter serving former 'mixed first class' and 'mens first class' areas. The latter is lit by clerestory lights, and is decorated throughout with painted friezes and murals depicting mythological scenes. There are panelled bar counters, overlights with glazing bars, wall panelling, cast-iron fireplace with moulded surround and overmantel panel, with flanking doorway to original toilet area. The mixed first class area has fabric-faced panelling which incorporates a three-light timber mullioned window to light service stair, and a hearth with surround and overmantel panelling. Mullion and transom windows have leaded lights incorporating apple tree motif in upper lights. Panelled bar with overlights and half-glazed doors giving access to main stair with gate restricting access to attic floor.

History

The 'Carlisle Undertaking' was the most important of the three schemes of complete Government control of the supply of intoxicants introduced in 1916. The State Management Board appointed Harry Redfern as its Principal Architect, and he produced schemes for the remodelling of existing public houses and designs for 'improved' houses, of which 'The Apple Tree' was the first. Despite interior alterations at ground floor level, the building remains a significant example of the work of the State Management Scheme in Carlisle, which influenced the design of 'improved' public houses throughout Britain in the Inter-War period. The survival of the first floor plan, furnishings and fittings is of particular significance as such provision was regarded as experimental at the time, providing for segregated areas for different combinations of sexes and social classes.

Building Description

Methodist Central Hall, 1922 by A Brocklehurst and A W Hornabrook of Brocklehurst and Co, Manchester and H E Ayris of Carlisle. Built by Laings of Carlisle. Steel framed structure, with local red sandstone ashlar with panels of sand faced red brick on the first floor under a Cumbrian slate roof. Octagonal roof over central hall surmounted by ventilation lantern.

Plan Form

Central octagonal hall on the ground floor with crush hall and side corridors around, and a gallery over. Flanking wings of basements and two storeys.

Exterior

The principal elevation has a central pedimented section flanked by low wings with aedicules. Within the central pediment there is a decorative date panel and the pediment is supported on giant ashlar pilasters, at their base is a rusticated sandstone plinth. The entablature has the raised lettering METHODIST CENTRAL HALL. Between the giant pilasters the elevation is divided into four elements. On the ground floor, four voussoir arches with keystones. Two are semi-circular arched fan lights over doors with cornices supported on decorative consoles and two are full height round-headed windows; all have leaded glazing in small panels, divided by white, painted timber glazing bars. Within the central bay the first floor is recessed with a curved facade divided into four panels by pilasters, as they have no caps or bases. Each panel is divided into an upper sandstone section containing an oculus decorated with festoons. The flanking bays are almost symmetrical, having two lights on each floor followed by an aedicule on the first floor with a curved leaded hood on decorative consoles over the side entrance doors. The south east wing has an extra light beyond to fill the gap between the hall and the town clerk's office. This wing is set at a slight angle to the rest of the elevation to align it with the frontage of the adjacent building.

Interior

Central octagonal hall with Choir, Rostrum and Organ facing the congregation; vestries and ancillary rooms behind. Rows of seating for 1200. The gallery is supported on 14 steel cantilevers encased in plaster decoration. Wooden panelling around the lower part of the walls at ground and first floor level. Leaded stained glass full height windows to three sides. Elaborately carved wooden pulpit in front of original piped organ set within a carved wooden organ case, decorated with a geometric frieze in gold leaf. Stained glass windows to either side of the organ pipes depicting the Christina values of Faith, Charity, Peace and Courage designed and made by Messrs Humphries, Jackson and Ambler Ltd., Manchester. Painted wooden panelling along the gallery including wreath detail. Concave ceiling with circular lattice air vents and frieze detailing including knots, foliage and festoons. Side corridors, with wooden panelling and further stained glass. Flanking wings containing ancillary rooms with original staircases, plasterwork, fireplaces and wooden panelling.

Sources

Unpublished account of building provided by applicant.

The Methodist Central Hall of 1922 built to a high standard of design, retains an intact set of interior fittings and possesses both special architectural and historic interest. It has considerable architectural presence within the City Centre, and reflects the continuing significance of non-Conformist worship within Carlisle in the early C20.

Building Description

Formerly known as: Redness Hall GREENMARKET.

Includes: Nos. 58 AND 60 FISHER STREET.

House (sometimes called Redness Hall), then Guildhall, now cafe with museum over. Documentary evidence suggests that the present building replaced an earlier structure which was burnt down in the fire that broke out in Carlisle on 4th May 1391 which also destroyed many other properties. The hall was probably constructed between 1396 and 1407 for Richard de Redness.

An L-shaped, 3-storey, timber-framed building with 5 bays along Fisher Street and 3 bays on Greenmarket. Cumbrian Slate roof laid to diminishing courses with one stack remaining at northern end of Fisher Street wing. The ground floor was probably open originally but it is now filled in with stuccoed walls and round-arched windows. The large timber posts are still evident and retain some of their decorative mouldings. The upper floors have moulded jetties and cornices. Only the posts are visible externally, the rest of the framing is hidden by rendering, together with weatherboarding on the first floor and medieval brick tile on the second floor. The framing of these floors is visible on the inside and consists of tall rectangular panels; those on the street side of the building are divided by a mid-rail and the lower half of these panels contain pairs of curved braces (rising from the tie-beam to a post or an intermediate stud). The framing of the cross-walls at first floor level has large concave braces (rising from the wall post to the tie-beam) on each side of the building. The pattern on the second floor is slightly different, for the bracing on the street side consists of large convex/tension braces (rising from the tie-beam to the wall post). The opposite bracing is concave like the floor below. The infill of the panelling is mainly wattle and daub with medieval brick tile on the second floor. Some panels remain unrendered for display inside the museum. The original roof construction, although altered, still survives over the 5 bay Fisher Street section and consists of 4 crown posts. The crown posts are jowled on both sides and have a rectangular section. Part of the original collar plate survives with convex down-braces from post to tie and concave up-braces from post to plate. Although now hipped, the roof of this wing was originally gabled.

The roof over the 3 bays of the Greenmarket wing appears to be a later replacement and consists of canted queen posts, clasped purlins and collared rafters. The purlins are clasped between the rafter and a canted or raked queen post which is jowled on the lower side. One of the trusses (which appears to be identical to the others) is clearly an insertion with a supporting post that is pegged onto the original timber framework. Documentary evidence suggests that these alterations to the medieval building, including the infilling of the ground floor, might have occurred between 1573 and 1662. Such a date for the queen post roof would be quite reasonable.

The Greenmarket elevation has, on the first floor, Yorkshire sash windows with glazing bars and on the second floor sash and Yorkshire sash windows with glazing bars in brick reveals. Medieval gargoyles are plaster casts of originals in Carlisle Cathedral, first placed here in 1844; all except one on facade are 1978 replacements. Beside some windows are fixed hooks to support guild flags.

Fisher Street elevation has ground floor 1988 shop windows; upper floor 2-light C15 cusped headed window; plank-faced oriel with upper small casement windows with glazing bars. Other windows are casements and Yorkshire sashes.

INTERIOR: complete except for removal of some internal partitions and no original stairs. Most of the timber-framing and roof trusses are exposed.

Bronze plaque on stairs states that this opened as a museum in 1978. Further details are given in the Guildhall Museum leaflet. Scheduled Ancient Monument.

(Department of National Heritage: County List of Scheduled Monument - Cumbria, SAM No. 413: English Heritage: 1992-).

Location Address
Carlisle Courts Of Justice, Earl Street, Carlisle, CA1 1DJ

Building Description

Summary of Building

Statue of Major Francis Aglionby MP, 1843 by Musgrave Lewthwaite Watson.

Reasons for Designation

This statue of Major Francis Aglionby, designed by Musgrave Lewthwaite Watson in 1843, is listed at Grade

II for the following principal reasons:

- * Designer: Musgrave Lewthwaite Watson was a talented and distinguished sculptor of national repute;
- * Artistic quality: this is a statue of intrinsic artistic quality considered to be an exceptionally fine example of Watson's vigorous style of costumed sculpture.

History

Major Francis Aglionby MP died in 1840 while entering court on his way to the bench in his capacity as Chairman of the Cumberland Quarter Sessions; at a subsequent inquest, the jury returned a verdict of Natural Death. Two years later it was determined to erect a life size statue to his memory to be executed by the sculptor Musgrave Watson. The completed statue was erected in 1843 in the large room originally intended as the grand entrance hall to the Criminal Court, within a few yards from his place of death. It remained in this location until urgent repairs in 1980 led to it being removed to an upper floor landing. When the new Crown Court was opened in 1992 the statue was moved to a new pedestal outside its main entrance, and at some point, in order to restrict deterioration of the statue, an impermeable paint was applied to the figure. Francis Aglionby was an English Whig politician. He was elected as MP for Cumberland Eastern in 1837, and held this seat until his death in 1840. Aglionby also served in the Cumberland militia, where he rose to the rank of Major. He served as chairman of the county's quarter sessions in Cumberland from 1818 until his death. M L Watson (1804-1847) was born at Dalston, near Carlisle, and left for London in 1824 to study sculpture.

He met John Flaxman, studied for a short while at the Royal Academy Schools, and travelled abroad to study in Italy. For a time he worked with the leading portrait sculptor of the period Sir Francis Chantrey, and completed some of Chantrey's works after the latter's death. He exhibited frequently at the Royal Academy. Five of Watson's works are listed including one of the four bronze reliefs on the base of Nelson's Column,

'The Battle of St Cape Vincent' (Grade I), and his Earl of Lonsdale Statue, Carlisle (Grade II). Amongst his notable work is the portrait of John Flaxman which is exhibited in the Flaxman Gallery in University College London, and was awarded a posthumous Prize Medal at the Great Exhibition of 1851. Details

Materials: Caen stone on original base surmounting a later, rusticated sandstone pedestal.

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

The statue is set on a high pedestal immediately outside the main entrance to the Carlisle Courts of Justice. It is a life-size portrait statue, the figure facing forward in a standing attitude; the Major is represented in the dress of a country gentleman, with an outer gown, probably referring to his judicial role, elegantly tied across his breast. He carries a volume of Justice of the Peace and Parish Officer (1755) by Richard Burns in his right hand. Some physical damage has occurred to the statue, notably parts of the fingers of the left hand and part of the left foot are missing.

The front (south) face of the pedestal bears an inscribed slate plaque which reads 'Major Francis Aglionby MP 1777 – 1840 for many years Chairman of the Cumberland Quarter Sessions.'

St Georges United Reformed Church, 35 Warwick Road, Carlisle, CA1 1EE

Building Description

Summary of Building

Former Presbyterian now United Reformed Church, 1862-3 in Romanesque style; attached manse of 1880 in Romanesque and gothic style.

Reasons for Designation

Church of St George United Reformed Church (URC) with its attached manse is listed at Grade II for the following principal reasons:

* Architectural interest: the church reflects the austerity associated with Presbyterianism but never-the-less has an interesting and well-detailed main elevation articulated unusually in a Romanesque style;

* Interior: the church interior retains original fixtures and fittings including the gallery; slender, fluted uprights; eight-bay wagon-roof; vestibule screens; a fine war memorial; and original cantilevered stairs;

* Intactness: despite the loss of the benches, the church and manse have remained intact without significant alteration;

* Group value: the church and its attached manse benefit from a functional and proximal group value which complements each other and the street scene in which they are located.

Building Description

REASONS FOR DESIGNATION DECISION:

The 1881 North East Railway goods station at London Road, Carlisle, is recommended for listing at Grade II for the following principal reasons:

- * Architecture: a good quality design that expresses its function well, employing well-finished red brick and overall high quality detailing to both elements of the complex;
- * Intactness: taken together, the buildings represent a complete example of a goods station comprising both a goods office and goods shed;
- * Rarity: an increasingly rare survival of a large, urban goods station, whose interest is enhanced by the survival of a two-storey attached office building; * Group value: the goods station benefits from a spatial group value with the adjacent (but earlier) Grade II listed Station Hotel and although not contemporary, the pair share a functional group value as C19 railway buildings.

Statutory Reference: 094-0/09/10003 Grade: II Delisted Date:

Location Address

Tottergill Farm, Heads Nook, Brampton, CA8 9DP

Building Description

Range of farm outbuildings, incorporating a range of functions. Mid and late C19 with minor C20 alterations. Regularly coursed squared sandstone, with ashlar dressings, plain and crow stepped gables and a slated roof.

Plan

Irregular 'U' shaped range, combined an earlier 'L' shaped range with a later linear range to the north.

Main Range

Ten bays of 2 storeys to the yard, and single storey to the rear, being built into the bank. Central tower of 3 storeys with dovecote openings within crow-stepped gable surmounted by weathervane. Wide, double shouldered arch to cart bay at base, and a narrow 2-light flush-mullioned window to each floor above. To the left, 3 openings, one full height, each with double shouldered arch, and housing a pig sty, with enclosure wall, feed chute and gates, with an inner wall and entry. The tall opening has the hen coop above. Further left, 2 stable doorways with a glazing bar sash window between and 3 such sashes above. To the right of the tower, 3 doorways, one blocked, and narrow windows with flush surrounds between the doorways. Rear elevation with tall double doorway below shallow gablet gives cart access to storage floor. Slit breathers to right and left, and further right, 4 doorways and a rear wall chimney.

Attached range to south

Single storey with overlofts, with plain door openings to north side wall east and west gables, the latter giving cart access to loft. Of special interest as a multi purpose range of outbuildings demonstrating the development of integrated farmsteads within multi-phased sites, with strong architectural detail characterising the latter stages of development.

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Terrace of 28 houses. 1840s or early 1850s. Flemish bond brickwork with light headers (some houses rendered) on chamfered plinth (all dressings of painted stone) and stone-bracketed metal gutter. Common Welsh slate roof, except Nos 51-61 of higher roof line, hipped on corner; shared ridge brick chimney stacks. 2 storeys, some of single bay, others of 2 bays; double-depth plan (some may have been back-to-back and knocked through). Houses are paired with left and right doors (many are C20) in original pilastered surrounds. Each pair of houses is separated from the next by a round-arched through-passageway to court behind, with plank door and occasionally a radial fanlight (unglazed). Some sash windows, but mostly C20 casements in brick reveals with stone sills, flat brick arches and shutter hinge blocks; the 2-bay houses have a window over the archways. Nos 5-17 have windows in stone architraves; No.21 has C20 shop window inserted; No.25 also had a C20 shop front, but replacement sash window fitted 1990. Between Nos 53 and 55 the archway is large with double doors. The corner property No.61 was the White Ox Inn, but its ground-floor shop window has been blocked and a C20 sash window inserted; on the rounded angle is the former inn sign in the form of a large rectangular stucco panel surmounted by an ox (now with 1989 mural of a pastoral scene, the ox converted to a cow; on the OS map this now appears as part of No.11 Woodruffe Terrace). INTERIORS not inspected. This does not appear on the 1842 Map of Carlisle, but does appear on the 1848 Tithe Map. Carlisle Journal (1877) refers to the sale of the well-accustomed beer house, the White Ox, on St Nicholas Street. (Carlisle Journal: 16 February 1877).

Statutory Reference: 094-0/09/00014 Grade: II Delisted Date:

Location Address

Manor House, Brackenthwaite Farm, Heads Nook, Brampton, CA8 9DW

Building Description

Barns adjoining Manor House, with core of original Manor House. Earliest part is probably late C16 bastle type house: date of 1632 with initials I A over entrance may be contemporary with adjoining buildings to right; extensively altered and extended to left in late C18, with inscription over entrance James & Margaret Atkinson and date, which could be 1793, but now partly erased. Mixed sandstone rubble walls, common graduated green slate roof. 2 storeys and numerous bays, built on slope, so appears as single storey to rear. Central bays are original house with extremely thick walls. Late C16 entrance has chamfered red sandstone surround, chamfered and shaped lintel stone, with later irregularly incised date and initials; slightly splayed jambs on inside, have 2 sets of drawbar holes. Walls appear to have been refaced in the late C18, so all other original feature are now hidden and replaced by slit vents. Rear wall has been raised in height at 2 periods. Barn to left has entrances and loft door with plain stone surrounds and slit vents. Rear has 2 large cart entrances giving access to upper floor barn. Barn to right has large round archway passage giving access to more recent house; 2 small windows above have chamfered surrounds and holes for iron bars. Right is later entrance and earlier filled upper floor entrance above; window to right is partly covered by C19 single storey extension. Rear has similar windows above arch and large cart entrance to upper floor barn to left. C20 cattle shed now covers original farmyard; this and all other adjoining buildings are not included in listing. A detached barn to the north-east is listed separately in Castle Carrock C.P. Manor House, although dated 1786, was extensively altered in the 1860s and is not listed.

Proposed barn conversion to dwelling east of The Old Vicarage and north of St Marys Church, Cumrew, Heads Nook

Building Description

Implement store, formerly house and barn. Probably late C16. Extremely thick red sandstone rubble walls, partly of materials from the nearby medieval church, green slate roof, 2 storeys, 2 bays. Ground floor entrance, left, has plank door and chamfered surround, left and right of entrance are fragments of dogtooth and zigzag decorated stone. Above right is a small square window with chamfered surround and holes for iron bars. C19 cart entrance has been cut through wall to right; plank doors, wooden lintel and snecked stone surround. Single storey lean to extension to rear, has late C17 mullioned windows, now filled. Original rear wall is now internal and partly demolished when extended. Its position close to the gates of the churchyard and the inclusion of church materials in its construction, suggest that this building could have been the fortified vicarage. Adjoining buildings, also belonging to Cumrew Farm, are listed separately and included for G.V. with Cumrew Farmhouse.

Building Description

Summary of Building

Legacy Record - This information may be included in the List Entry Details.

Reasons for Designation

The late C17/early C18 cruck-framed barn at Helme Farm is recommended for designation at Grade II for the following principal reasons: * Rarity: Cruck-framing was once a commonly used in north-west England for roof construction during the C17 and C18 but few examples now remain * Survival: Buildings retaining substantial elements of cruck-framed construction are likely to merit listing and this example at Helme Farm retains two pairs of relatively complete cruck frames * Architectural Interest: Cruck-framed construction is a characteristic form of simple timber-frame construction * Date: The building pre-dates 1840 and all buildings constructed prior to this date which survive in anything like their original condition are suitable candidates for listing

Details

CUMREW CC94/0/10011 CRUCK-FRAMED BARN AT HELME FARM 20-SEP-10 CCII Helme Farm three bay single-storey lateC17/early C18 cruck-framed barn.CCMATERIALS: Random rubble sandstone beneath a slate roof.CCPLAN: The barn is rectangular in plan.CCEXTERIOR: The front (east) elevation has evidence of rebuilding at its north end using snecked stone. A timber plank door beneath a timber lintel gives internal pedestrian access. Off centre double timber doors covered externally with corrugated iron sheeting provide the main access. A modern metal extension has been added to the south end of the barn. The south gable end has a lean-to corrugated iron shed attached. There is a ventilation slot high in the barn's gable end. The cruck-framed barn's rear elevation is largely obscured by vegetation but a boarded up central door is visible. The north elevation has a modern corrugate iron lean-to attached above which two narrow ventilation slots are visible in the barn's wall. The barn is covered by a pitched slate roof. CCINTERIOR: The cruck-framed barn is three bays long with a concrete floor and painted stone walls. There are two pairs of cruck frames each with a collar and the cruck-framed construction is a full cruck with side purlins carried on outer blades. The roof structure is boarded but gaps in the boarding reveal a mix of modern and early timbers. There is a boarded rear door in the central bay, a front pedestrian door in the south bay giving access to a modern metal extension, and a front pedestrian door in the north bay. There are ventilation slots in each gable end, all of which are boarded apart from one in the north gable CCHISTORY:

Cruck-framed barns in Cumbria are now a relatively rare building type. Although the precise date of construction of this one at Helme Farm is unknown it compares well with other examples of C17 and C18 date found elsewhere in the county. It has been reroofed, replacement doors have been added to the front elevation, and modern lean-to structures have been added to three sides of the barn.CCSOURCES: Ordnance Survey Map 1:1200, epoch 1 (1843-93) Ordnance Survey Map 1:2500, epoch 2 (1891-1912) Brunskill, R, W, Traditional Buildings of Cumbria: The County of the Lakes (2002) 46-51 English Heritage: Vernacular Houses Selection Guide; Domestic Buildings 1 (2007) English Heritage: Agricultural buildings Selection Guide (2007) Lake, J, Historic Farmsteads: Preliminary Characterisation: Historic Farm Building Preliminary Character Statement (English Heritage)

Right-hand end bay with 2-light first floor casement window above blocked opening, matching the arrangement to the front of the advanced wing which has a doorway with a painted surround below an upper floor casement. Rear elevation facing enclosed garden of 6 bays, with 4 ground floor windows, all 2 over 2 pane sashes, 6 upper floor windows of matching pattern and a central doorway with C20 multi-pane glazed door. Attached flanking wall incorporating doorway extends westwards to join perimeter wall that enclosed the former workhouse site on the west side and 12 metres in either direction of the entrance on the south side. The wall is built of coursed sandstone, with south wall with shallow pitched copings. The gate piers are square on plan, with shallow pyramidal caps. To the right of the entrance a long single storeyed outbuilding is built on the inner side of the wall. From the south-east corner, the wall extends approx 12 metres on the east side of the yard and incorporates a pair of earth closets which extend beyond the wall. INTERIOR: Not inspected. HISTORY: The Dalston Workhouse was built on land granted for the purpose in 1803, when the common land of the village was enclosed. The complex was built by Henry Tiffen of Buckabank for the cost of £400. It appears to have had a short life as a workhouse, with only 17 inmates in 1828 and in 1838, this responsibility of the parish was taken over by the Carlisle Union. A small scale, purpose built parish workhouse of 1828, predating the passing of the Poor Law Amendment Act of 1834, and the subsequent development of large scale institutions throughout England.

Building Description

House originally called Holme Hill, now private school. Early C19 with stable arch dated and inscribed 1887 L.C.S., with Salkeld coat of arms; incorporating C17 and C18 features. Calciferous sandstone ashlar with v-jointed quoins on chamfered plinth. Rendered wings; graduated greenslate roofs; ashlar chimney stacks. Entrance facade: 3 storeys, 7 bays with flanking low 2-storey, L-shaped 6-bay wings, making overall U-shape; stable arch adjoining to right. Central bay projects with shaped cornice enclosing Salkeld coat of arms. 6-panel door in stone architrave; stone porch on reeded pilasters with decorated parapet. Single-pane sash windows in eared architraves, second floor with pedimented cornices. Pilastered attic with balustraded parapet. Wings: 2-pane sash windows nearest house in stone architraves. At right-angles are ground floor Venetian windows with Diocletian windows above. Entrance at extreme left has reused early C18 Ionic porch with moulded entablature and modillioned cornice and pediment enclosing Holme(?) coat of arms. Stable arch to right is included for G.V., but former stables are of no interest. Garden facade of 7 bays with 3-storey single-bay tower to right. Single-pane sash windows, with glazing bars on upper floor. Balustraded parapet incorporates Salkeld coat of arms. T.S. cypher over garden entrance. Adjoining buildings to right of tower are of no interest. 2 fireplaces dated 1638 suggest that the core of the building is earlier than the C19 facade. Seat of the Holme family from the medieval period, originally known as The Hill, passed to George Holme Sumner in 1794 and sold to Col. Thomas Salkeld in 1810. Remained in the Salkeld family until C20. School takes its name from its original location at Lime House, Wetheral.

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Farmhouse, now farm outbuildings. Dated 1697, but with earlier C17 elements, and with C19 and C20 alterations and additions. Part rendered and painted rubble stone, with ashlar dressings, and C20 corrugated sheet roof covering. South east elevation, two storeys, three bays, central entry plan, now altered internally. Doorway now part blocked, with moulded ashlar surround. Lintel and cornice, the lintel bearing the inscription I.H. A.H.1697. At the level of the elevation, above a blocked shallow two light chamfer mullion window to the north east. The moulding is interrupted by a C20 stable door with window. To the south west, the moulding shelters a 4 x 3 pane window in a plain stone surround. Above the doorway, a C20 inserted taking in doorway. To the north east, set above the lower mullioned window is a matching two light mullion window, also blocked, and two further blocked tall rectangular openings, one to each end bay. Gable elevations partially or wholly obscured by attached outbuildings. North west side wall with single storey lean-to, late C18, with a two light mullion window in its side wall and stone framed doorway to its C1700, that to be south west bay with a bolection-moulded surround and cornice shelf, that to the north east with jewelled jambs, deep lintel and cornice shelf. There is a suspended floor at the south west end, together with a chamfered hearth beam with plain steps. Roof carpentry not inspected, but said to be of single through-purlin construction, with wind-bracing to the central bay.

Forge Green, Roads leading from Buckabank to Bridge End, Dalston, CA5 7QG

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Former workhouse, now dwellings and offices with attached outbuildings boundary walls and gate piers. 1828, altered mid C19 for Dalston Parish. Built to the designs of Thomas Martin of Dalston.

Coursed squared red sandstone with quoin, painted stone dressings, ridge and gable chimneys and a Westmorland slate roof covering.

PLAN: Irregular courtyard plan, with L-shaped range to centre, enclosed garden to the rear and entrance courtyard enclosed by tall perimeter wall which supports an attached outbuilding.

EXTERIOR: Front (south) elevation of 2 storeys, 4 bays with a single bay advanced wing to the right-hand end. Central doorway with quoined surround and C20 door, with flanking 2 over 2 –pane sash windows in flush painted surrounds. Above, 3 similar windows. Right-hand end bay with 2-light first floor casement window above blocked opening, matching the arrangement to the front of the advanced wing which has a doorway with a painted surround below an upper floor casement. Rear elevation facing enclosed garden of 6 bays, with 4 ground floor windows all 2 over 2 pane sashes, 6 upper floor windows of matching pattern and a central doorway with C20 multi-pane glazed door. Attached flanking wall incorporating doorway extends westwards to join perimeter wall that enclosed the former workhouse site on the west, south and east sides. It extends approx. 29 metres on the west side and 12 metres in either direction of the entrance on the south side. The wall is built of coursed sandstone, with south wall with shallow pitched copings. The gate piers are square on plan, with shallow pyramidal caps. To the right of the entrance a long single storeyed outbuilding is built on the inner side wall. From the south-east corner, the wall extends approx 12 metres on the east side of the yard and incorporates a pair of earth closets which extend beyond the wall.

INTERIOR: not inspected.

HISTORY: the Dalston Workhouse was built on land granted for the purpose in 1803, when the common land of the village was enclosed. The complex was built by Henry Tiffen of Buckabank for the cost of £400. It appears to have had a short life as a workhouse, with only 17 inmates in 1828 and in 1838, this responsibility of the parish was taken over by the Carlisle Union. A small scale, purpose built parish workhouse of 1828, predating the passing of the Poor Law Amendment Act of 1834, and the subsequent development of large scale institutions throughout England.

Location Address

Hawksdale Pastures, Dalston, Carlisle CA5 7EJ

Building Description

Farm outbuilding. Late C19 with minor C20 alterations. Rubble sandstone dressings, quoins and a Westmorland slate roof laid to diminishing courses.

Plan

Linear plan with integral wheelhouse and wheelpit.

Exterior

West elevation. Three storeys, five bays with two window openings to ground and first floors, and three smaller openings to first floor, all with flush surrounds. Tall taking-in door to south end of upper floor. At ground floor level towards south end, wide opening below shallow arch with dressed voussoirs, now blocked, formerly access to internal wheelhouse. North gabled with quoined doorways at north-west corner to ground floors, the latter now a window. Small rectangular opening to gable apex.

Interior

The building retains an internal wheelhouse with wheelpit and undershot waterwheel, and upright shaft with toothed drive wheel and spur wheels to transfer the power through horizontal line shafting, some of which survives in-situ. Timber floors with closely-spaced joists are supported on heavy beams. In situ threshing and chopping machinery, and powered hoist mechanism. Tie-beam trusses with diagonally-set ridge purlins and trenched and lapped side purlins.

A well preserved and little altered example of a late C19 powered farm outbuilding designed to house processing machinery driven from in internal waterwheel, and which retains its wheelhouse waterwheel, power transmission and some processing machinery.

Listing Title: 25-26 The Square, Dalston

Statutory Reference: 503924	Grade: II	Delisted Date:
-----------------------------	-----------	----------------

Location Address

The Cottage, 25 The Square, Dalston, Carlisle, CA5 7PY
26 The Square, Dalston, Carlisle, CA5 7PY

Building Description

Two single-storey cottages converted about the mid-C19 out of a probable late-medieval longhouse of mid-C16 date.

Materials

Snecked sandstone and rubble with later brick additions rendered in pebble dash beneath a slate roof.

Plan

Rectangular with a small lean-to addition to the rear.

Exterior

The building is of five bays with no. 25 occupying the two left bays and no. 26 occupying the three right bays. The front elevation has sash windows with horns and glazing bars with window panes arranged two-over-two. Front doors to both properties are of timber with three longitudinal panels below small glass lights arranged three-over-two. All door surrounds, window sills and lintels are plain and painted. The rear elevation has a low, flat roofed full length later extension with two plain windows, one to each property, in the rear wall above the extension. The extension itself has a mix of horned sash windows and later sash windows. Window sills are a mix of sandstone and concrete. The rear door to no. 26 is of similar design as the front doors whilst the rear door of no 25 is a modern timber and glass addition. There is a brick chimney stack to no. 26.

Interior

No 25 has a living room and bedroom at the front with kitchen, bathroom and second bedroom off a corridor to the rear. The fireplace in the living room is blocked and a modern gas fire installed. Part of a cruck frame is visible in two walls of the living room. The attic contains numerous early roof timbers and a substantial cruck frame. There is a brick-built flue against the left sandstone dividing wall and a modern brick-built firewall between no 25 & 26. It has a living room and bedroom at the front with bathroom, kitchen and second bedroom off a central corridor to the rear. Surviving early timberwork is visible in the living room includes parts of two cruck frames and a painted ceiling beam. The fireplace is a modern addition. The front bedroom has part of a cruck frame visible. The fireplace in this room has been removed and blocked. The rear bedroom has a simple fire surround. There is part of a cruck frame visible in the central corridor. The attic contains a brick chimney stack and numerous early roof timbers including the three substantial cruck frames partly visible elsewhere in the building. There is also evidence to suggest that the early front window openings were larger than they are at present.

History

No 25-26 The Square, Dalston is a cruck-framed building which may originally have been constructed as a thatched-roofed medieval longhouse. Similar buildings in the area have been dated to between 1489 and 1615. It is considered to be the oldest surviving domestic structure in the village. Over a period of time several changes have been made to the building; these included the addition of a rear outshot, the insertion of a brick chimney stack, removal of the thatched roofing and replacement with slate, division of the building into two cottages and modification of the front window. Some of these changes are considered to have taken place in the mid-C19. In more recent times the outshot has been removed and replaced by a single-storey extension.

Reason for Designation

No 25 & 26 Dalston Square is designated at Grade II for the following principal reasons:

The essential structure of the building is a C16 longhouse retaining an abundant amount of well preserved early timberwork including four substantial cruck frames; and
It is considered to be the oldest surviving domestic structure within Dalston and has group value with other listed buildings around the village square.

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

House. Core possibly of c1661 (using stone from nearby Levington Hall) for Edmund Appleby, with extensive extensions of 1875 for the Kirklington-Saul family. Calciferous sandstone coursed rubble, with dressed stone and ashlar; roof mostly removed, but graduated slate where it remains, stone chimney stacks. 2 and 3 storeys, numerous bays in roughly E-shape. Core of 3 storeys, 5 bays with rendered front and 3 storeys, 4 bay wing of coursed rubble facing road. Central entrance renewed: round headed doorway flanked by twin Doric columns on supporting plinth. Ground and first floor sash windows with architraves and entablatures with pulvinated friezes. Left-hand window of ground floor attached to a door. Second floor has square windows with wooden casements, similar entablatures and friezes with shaped gables and modillion eaves cornice, all added in 1875. Wing facing road had sash windows (now mostly removed) and gable ends treated to match the Jacobean style additions. 1875 additions are 2 storeys with attic in ashlar. One wing matches that facing road, the other is a very large L-shaped block added to it. The matching wing has shaped gable ends, an escutcheon in the gable and shell niches above ground floor entrance and first floor triple window (imparting to each a Venetian window flavour). The short piece of the L which corresponds to the earlier house, is 3 bays with projecting right-hand side and cornice above ground and first floors. Shaped gable dormer with finial in centre. The long part of the L has 5 symmetric bays and one at the south-east end. 3 windows to second and sixth bays, single to first, third and fifth. shaped gable dormers to second, fourth and sixth bays, first, third and fifth have plain segmental hoods. Rear of north west wing treated similarly in coursed rubble with central ashlar projection flanked by 3-window bays. Empty and dilapidated at time of survey, roof being stripped of slates.

Building Description

Church. C12, with C14 alterations, renovations of 1849 by Bloxham of Rugby and tower 1897 for James Carruthers. Chancel is mostly of dressed red sandstone from the nearby Roman Wall, with C19 ashlar dressings, nave and tower of snecked ashlar. Graduated slate roofs with decorative ridge tiles. 3 storey, north west square tower has pointed arch entrance and windows with hood-moulds; louvred vents to bell chamber; angle buttresses, string courses, castellated parapet and clock to north face. 5 bay nave is externally 1849: north and south aisles have pointed lancets and hood moulds: trefoil clerestory windows with hood moulds: west entrance has trefoil head in open pediment, with dog tooth decorations. 3 bay chancel has round-headed lancets and tripartite east window in C12 walls: 1897 vestry to south wall. Interior of nave has 4-bay arcades which Pevsner considers to be c1170, of rounded columns with square abaci and rounded arches with one step and slight chamfer: pointed arch of re-used stone to west, suggests nave was originally longer: capitals are carved with stylized leaves, which have been partly cut away when the arcade was filled and the aisles demolished in the C14 after destruction in a border raid. C12 chancel arch of 2 orders of columns with spur and crocket capitals, the innermost order is a continuous roll and the arch has rolls and dog-tooth decorations. Aisle windows have curvilinear leaded lights, with east windows of early C20 stained glass. Open timber roof. Internal oak panelled porch of mid-C19. C19 table font with 1911 brass cover, C19 carved Gothic pulpit and brass eagle lectern: all other furnishings late C19 or early C20. Chancel has C12 splays at east end, to north and south windows: other splays are C19 in enlarged original openings. South door, now inside vestry, is C12 with round-headed arch and incomplete dogtooth decoration. Open timber roof and all other furnishings late C19 or early C20. Mixed diamond leaded clear glass and late C19 and early C20 stained glass to sides and east window. Churchyard retains its gravestone in rows, some of C18 and one as early as 1660's: an earlier graveslab buried under tarmac path, but still partly visible.

Farmhouse with outbuildings attached forming an L-shaped group around cobbled farmyard. 1822 (for the occupiers, T&A Wannap), the house incorporating work of 1694 (for D.A Cartwright). Coursed local rubble (the house rendered); slate gable-end roofs.

Three unit plan with through-passage and outshut, the latter lengthened and raised in 1822. Two storeys. Datestone (1822) over rear doorway. Front regular three-way range, the windows with raised surrounds and four pane harness sashes; central doorway (early ledge door with strap hinges) with simple slate slab porch. Quoining to right.

Rear

Doorway with raised surround; large sash window (lighting stairs) to left, and (to left again) two smaller windows lighting cellar and small upper room, all windows in raised surrounds. Ridge and end stacks, the former renewed in brick.

Interior

Remarkably intact set of 1822 fixtures. Room to left of cross-passage with raised panel cupboard doors to either side of renewed fireplace. Room to right (housebody or hall) with heck partition with settle; fireplace with later C19 range flanked by cupboards with depressed panels; two ceiling beams; flag floor. Room further to right (parlour), furnishings slightly more elaborate to reflect high status of room; panels to cupboard with beaded margins, fielded panelled internal shutters. Plaster cornice. Contemporary door surrounds and doors; fielded panels to parlour door. Open well stair (within outshut): stick balusters, moulded newels ramped rail and moulded head ends.

First Floor

Complete set of doors and surrounds; internal shutters; cornice to bedroom above parlour. Cupboards with panelled doors.

Farmbuildings

Stable adjoins house to right; bryers with hay loft return to farm range; the latter has various windows, some with raised surrounds, and large segmented arched carriage way. Revised datestone of 1694. External steps (with kennels below). Outer elevation plain with ground floor windows only. Internally the forge and large stone smoke-hood survive. Roof members morticed and pegged.

 Statutory Reference: 504631 Grade: II Delisted Date:

Location Address

Clockey Mill, West Hall, Brampton, CA8 2BS

Building Description

Water-powered corn mill, early C18 with mid C19 extension.

MATERIALS: roughly coursed sandstone rubble with dressed sandstone quoins under stone slates, with some asbestos patching. Modern slate roof covering to extension.

PLAN: L-shaped plan form formed by original rectangular building oriented north-south with an external wheel pit to the south west and a later rectangular extension to the north west.

EXTERIOR: Main (North West) Elevation has a projecting gabled block, probably a cart shed with store over, to the right and a plain rectangular entrance to the left; this opening with a stone lintel and chamfered door jambs has been widened with the loss of the left jamb and the insertion of steel and concrete lintels. The only other feature on this otherwise plain elevation is a small window opening with a stone lintel in the right corner. The cart shed with a pitched roof has a single ground floor window with a 6-pane casement and a centrally placed first floor loading door with boarded wooden door. There is a cobbled area at the entrance to the cartshed and the mill building. Right gable has small aperture at the apex and the remains of the water wheel spindle and hub retaining the rotted remains of some of the spokes, extending over a stone lined wheel pit. The wheel pit formerly housed an overshot wheel fed from the east by a water chute, discharging via a culverted tailrace to the west; the remains of the metal fixings for the chute remain in situ attached to gable wall, which also bears grooved indentations caused by the rotation of the former water wheel. Left gable has a small ground floor window with stone lintel and sill at the left and a centrally placed window with timber lintel at first floor level; both have 4-pane casements. Rear (South East) Elevation has scattered fenestration including a first floor window with timber lintel bringing light to the milling floor, a small ground floor window with stone lintel and a small blocked opening with a stone surround set low down in a central position. To the right the present ground floor window with 6pane-casement frame was formerly another door.

INTERIOR: divided into three equal bays by an upper cruck roof structure incorporating two trusses with through-purlins and a ridge purlin; joints are largely trenched and lapped. The south bay retains some machinery including the wheel spindle and a pulley; the latter sits over a pit, now infilled with rubble, retaining the scant remains of timber framing which probably relates to an earlier configuration of machinery. The south gable wall has numerous holes, formerly housing further machinery. The south bay also has two of the original four wooden supports and a large lateral beam and wooden rail of the first floor mezzanine, which comprised the milling floor and housed the millstones. Set against the west wall of the central bay are the remains of a chimney flue. The central and north bays are open to the roof but were once floored.

SUBSIDIARY FEATURES: the water management system for the mill included a dam, a pond and a culverted tailrace. A single large and intact millstone is set into the path to the adjacent house.

HISTORY: Clockey Mill is mentioned in two rentals dated 18 July 1704 and 25 May 1715, which record the transfer of the mill from the Right Hon. Charles, Earl of Carlisle to first George Foroster and then John Routledge, Yeoman. The latter document refers to the 'Water Grist Mill' at Clockey with its houses, buildings, dams, wears and ponds. Most of the smaller water mills in Cumbria were established between 1690 and 1730. North Cumbria was historically dominated by cattle farming with very little arable land, which might suggest that the mill was producing animal feed from corn, beans, pulses etc. The first Ordnance Survey map of the area published in 1895 shows that the original rectangular mil building had been extended to the west by this time. This probably occurred in the mid C19 when the present house was constructed. The mill is thought to have continued in use into the early years of the C20 and in its latter years it housed a hydro-electric generator.

REASONS FOR DESIGNATED DECISION

This C18 corn mill is designated in Grade II for the following principal reasons:

It is a good example of a small C18 rural water mill

Its vernacular style is well executed with good use made of local materials

The original plan form is intact and readable

It retains evidence of original process, which aids understanding of the operation of a small-scale water driven corn mill

The survival of the crudely constructed and intact upper cruck roof structure is an important feature

The survival of milling machinery is rare nationally.

Riddings Junction Viaduct, Longtown

Building Description

Railway Viaduct presently disused. 1864, with minor late C20 alterations. Built for the North British Railway. Rock-faced red sandstone structure, comprised of 9 sharply-skewed arches with channelled ashlar voussoirs, the channelling carried diagonally across the arch soffits. The arches are supported on tapered rectangular piers. C20 brick parapets with concrete copings and handrail. The curved viaduct carried a single line track over Liddell water, the centre of which represents the border between England and Scotland. The scottish part of the viaduct lies in the parish of Canonbie, in the district of Annandale and Eskdale.

Building Description

Now farm outbuilding, unused at the time of inspection (9/96) Late C18 and early C19, with minor C20 alterations. Coursed squared red sandstone with ashlar dressings to openings, coped gable to south-west end, and graded Westmorland slate, and regularly coursed Welsh slate roof coverings. Linear plan of 2 builds, with external wheel at north-east end, mill drive and stone floor, drying kiln and storage overlofts, and loading platform and steps to south-west gable. SOUTH-EAST ELEVATION: off-centre double doorway with quoined surround, shallow basket arch with advanced keystone, and loft door above. Stepped catslide roof to 2-bay offshut to right. Gable wall at north-east end with former water wheel hub shaft protruding from opening at base of wall, the bearing end with metal banding. Circular scoring to gable wall caused by wheel side plates indicate wheel diameter of approx. 4 metres. Stone framed opening to gable apex above. To left of double doorway, doorway with massive surround gives access to former kiln chamber. Straight joint to left, and 2 further bays, each with small stone-framed opening. South-west gable with attached flight of steps and loading platform to serve quoined loft doorway. NORTH-WEST ELEVATION: Off-centre added offshut beneath catslide roof. To the right, doorway gives rear access to kiln chamber. Above, line of breathers ventilate storage overloft. Quoined doorway to right-hand end. INTERIOR: drive mechanism from former waterwheel survives to rear of inserted manager, including spur wheel, wallower and drives to stone floor above which retains mill stones in position, supported by heavy floor beams and vertical posts. Ground floor drying kiln hearth survives with separating masonry wall. Attic storey to the north-east section of the building retains 2 raised cruck trusses. A near-complete example of a rural water-powered mill, with an integral drying kiln, illustrating regional vernacular building traditions, and the scale and level of technical development of farm-based cereal processing in the area in the early C19.

Listing Title: DENTON HALL AND ADJ BARN/STABLES

Statutory Reference: 094-1/02/00078 Grade: I Delisted Date:

Location Address

Denton Hall, Low Row, Brampton, Cumbria

Building Description

Farmhouse, formerly tower house and hall. C14 tower for Denton family, with extensions dated 1829 over entrance, as part of the Earl of Carlisle's estate. Tower has walls over 2 metres thick of large blocks of calciferous sandstone rubble; extensions of mixed calciferous and red sandstone rubble with ashlar quoins; graduated green slate roof with coped gables and kneelers, cream brick chimney stacks on ashlar bases. Extended front, 2 storeys, 3 bays. 6-panel door with radial fanlight has alternate block surround and round arch with dated keystone. Sash windows with glazing bars have plain raised stone surrounds. Original tower still stands 3 storeys high, walls partly reduced in height when gables roof added; walls now partly internal but part of rear wall and side wall of the extended house are the tower walls. Rear has gabled C19 porch and C19 2-light mullioned windows. Left of porch is C19, but large footing stones suggest this is on the earlier foundations of the hall. Interior of tower is in an unaltered condition and has many features not visible from the outside and now covered by later buildings. Ground floor is not vaulted; splayed window in north wall has been enlarged. Newel staircase has ground floor entrance in south angle of east wall. First floor room has filled 2-light mullioned window in south wall with shouldered rear arch, splayed and with 2 step window seat; flanking narrow entrances have shouldered arches, that to left leads to stair and right is garderobe with small square filled window. Similar splayed window in west wall has also been filled; enlarged splayed window in north wall. Filled fireplace in east wall, retains its hearth stone. Corbel stones for original ceiling are still in place, with later ceiling on similar level, supported on beams sunk into wall. Second floor is now in roof space; stair continues up for 4-5 steps and stops. Adjoining barn/stables of 2 storeys, 4 bays, have whitewashed walls, plank doors and similar mullioned windows to rear of house. Encircling dry moat and earthworks remain in part. See Curwen, Castles & Towers of Cumberland & Westmorland, 1913, p276-7. Detached barn is listed separately.

Location Address

Stonegarthside Hall, Penton, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

House, formerly tower house. Probably late C13 for Baldwin de Wake, with wings dated 1682 on kneelers to right, for Henry Forster, incorporating earlier features. Large mixed blocks of calciferous and gray sandstone on projecting plinth stones with shaped quoins; reused medieval moulded stonework built into C17 extensions is thought to be from the original entrance to the building; crow stepped gables, ashlar chimney stacks (some of which are false), graduated Welsh slate roof. 3 storeys, of numerous bays in Scottish Baronial style; buildings on 3 sides enclosing a small courtyard, which was formerly part of the house with its roof removed. Unifying courtyard wing of 2 storeys, 3 bays is probably late C17. Former entrance has moulded architrave, pulvinated frieze and moulded cornice; flanking blocked windows. Upper floor windows has moulded architraves, now open and unglazed. Battlemented parapet with quatrefoil openings and ball finials to pilaster strips at each end. Flanking gabled wings of 1682 have sash windows with glazing bars in moulded stone architraves. Similar windows to sides; rear windows have chamfered stone surrounds. Central 3 bays of rear are part of the original lighting the basement (a similarly shaped stone is removed to an outhouse). Interior has broad medieval square staircase for full 3 storeys and continued up to 4th storey; engaged newel posts have semicircular insets with central fillet and pendants at top and bottom; worn stone steps in 2 flights between floors; a rare and early survival. The size of the staircase indicates a larger medieval building that the visible remains and it is probable that there are further remains within the extensions. St Nicholas Church, Nicholforest, Penton

Building Description

Parish church. 1866-7 by Alexander Graham. Snecked rock-faced sandstone with ashlar dressings. Slate roof in blue and purple bands with some shaped slates and with a crested tile ridge. Comprises a nave with a lower chancel which has an apsidal east end, and a north transept which has a lean-to vestry in the angle with the chancel. The west wall has two chamfered lancets below a rose window. The north and south nave walls each have three windows of two trefoiled lights with a quatrefoil below a pointed head and have buttresses between bays. On the south side there is an open timber porch to the right of the left-hand window. It rests on a stone base and has a steep roof. The entrance is formed by a gable truss with curved braces rising to a collar which supports a turned kingpost and has shaped bargeboards. The north gable of the transept has a window of three trefoiled lights below a foiled circle. The apsidal east end has five windows with bar tracery, each with a quatrefoil above a trefoil headed light. On the south side of the chancel there is a two-light window which almost matches those to the nave. Above the western bay of the nave there is a timber bellcote, painted white, and boarded below with trefoiled bell openings. It supports a slated spirelet.

Interior

The nave and chancel have softwood boarded roofs. The nave roof has high collars with bolted kingposts, straight braces, and wall posts rising from stone corbels. The transept arch is pointed and chamfered, and the chancel arch is chamfered in two orders, the inner order springing from foliated corbels. The chancel has a frieze of tiles at the wallhead, and a plain stone doorway leading to the vestry. The hexagonal pulpit is of oak. In the transept there are mural tablets in memory of John Ewart (d.1871) and James Mounsey (d.1835). The west windows and some of the north windows contain coloured glass. The chancel windows contain stained glass depicting Christ and the four evangelists.

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Church. Probably early C13 with tower of early C14 and restorations of 1827-28 and 1860-62. Large blocks of dressed red sandstone, probably from the nearby Roman Wall; graduated green slate roof with coped gables and cross finial. 3 storey square west tower, 5 bay nave/chancel. Fortified tower has walls 1.3 metres thick, with slit windows and chamfered plinth, rebuilt above string course before 1790, with battlemented parapet of 1827 and corner pinnacles of 1828; square bell chamber openings, existed before 1790. Nave chancel has buttressed walls with pointed lancets. Recessed C19 east window, suggests an infilled arch of the demolished chancel. C19 porch and vestry cover original north and south entrances; porch has stone slate roof with coped gable and cross finials; original entrance has round arch with 2 continuous chamfers and hood mould projecting to wither side of porch. Interior: C19 vaulted pine ceiling. C19 pews have panels of carved Gothic tracery with lectern and pulpit of similar details. White marble wall plaques to members of the Fawcett and Farrer families of Scaleby Castle and Scaleby Hall, all early C19. 3 early C20 stained glass windows. Bowl and stem font is dated 1707 with inscription MH, NB, WB, CG, CHURCH WARDENS. Free standing inscribed Roman Altar, probably from Birdoswald, has been reused in C14 with carvings on back and side of clerics (heads missing). Interior of round arch east entrance to tower has draw-bar hole. There is a bench mark on the south-west corner of the tower. See, Mrs J Palmer, Guide Book to All Saints Church Scaleby, 1972.

Building Description

Castle. Probably late C13, licence to crenellate granted to sir Robert de Tyllioli, 1307; mostly rebuilt in C15, with late C16 wing for Sir Edward Musgrave, altered in late C17 for William Gilpin and remodelled about 1838, probably by Thomas Rickman for the Fawcett family. Oldest work is of red sandstone from the nearby Roman Wall; later work of mixed Roman Wall stone and ashlar; slate roofs, brick and ashlar chimney stacks. L-shaped buildings with angle curtain wall form roughly a square; circular enclosing moat now filled; remaining water-filled outer moat. 4-storey, single-bay tower house, now in ruins, has 3-storey, 3-bay great hall adjoining to south; projecting 2-storey open roof polygonal curtain tower, adjoins to north-west; north-west facing 2-storey gatehouse, with joining high curtain wall, enclosing small courtyard; south range, at right angles to the great hall, is of 2 periods, that to right 3 storeys and attic, 3 bays and later building left of 3 storeys, 2 bays. Tower house has extremely thick chamfered plinth and chamfered string courses to each floor, chamfered lancet windows. Interior has remains of vaulted lower chamber, with remains of newel staircase in thickness of the wall, all other floors gone and walls in ruins, probably as a result of destruction after 1648 siege. curtain tower has C15 windows to ground floor and chamfered lancets above; wall probably battlemented but now in ruins. Wall to courtyard has inner gate giving access to tower house. Adjoining gatehouse has round arch entrance with recessed pointed arch. Large angle buttress, with large raised panels above entrance with central recess. Carved stone coat of arms of de Tylliols, to left, and central carved Gilpin arms above entrance. Interior has porters' lodges flanking entrance, with portcullis room above. Great hall has stepped entrance dated 1965. Sash windows with glazing bars and hood moulds were added in 1680's; filled slit vents. entrance from courtyard has pointed arch. Interior has tunnel vaulted lower chamber. South range has large stepped angle buttresses; building to right of 1567-1606 on earlier foundations has sash windows of 1680's and c1838, with above eaves gabled dormers; projecting 3-storey bay ends in gabled dormer. Circa 1838 building left has mullioned casement windows with glazing bars and hood moulds, that on ground floor left altered to a French window. End wall has C19 mullioned windows with quatrefoil window in gable angle. Coupled battlemented stone chimney stacks. Rear has courtyard entrance dated 1737 with cartouche of Richard Gilpin. Sash windows with glazing bars and C19 mullioned windows have square leaded panes. Birthplace of the Rev William Gilpin and his brother Sawrey Gilpin. Building Description

House incorporating medieval tower house. C14 for the Priory of St Mary's Carlisle, with c1690 facade and early C19 additions. Red sandstone ashlar walls with white freestone dressings, graduated slate roof and 4 ashlar ridge chimney stacks. 2 1/2 storeys, 7 bays: large rectangular tower approximately 8.3 metres wide by 19.5 metres long with walls 2 metres thick, encased entirely within the later house, but front wall for full length and one and a half storeys high, is original building. Entrance has freestone moulded surround, with moulded entablature, swan neck pediment and scrolled console brackets. Ground floor tripartite windows, with red sandstone moulded surrounds, swan neck pediments and scrolled console brackets on pilaster strips, probably date from early C19. String course to first floor and raised panel joining central upstairs window to entrance: first floor windows with c1690 freestone moulded surrounds, central window with scrolled console brackets. Raised quoins to first floor, chamfered plinth course of original tower can also be seen on side wall and internally, now forming dividing wall between rooms. Moulded cornice, prominent cast-iron gutter, one gable with plain coping the other crow-stepped with pinnacles to front and back: chimney stacks have drip moulds and cornice. Sash windows with glazing bars and oak iron-studded door with leaded fanlight. 2 extensions of 2 storeys, 2 bays to left, of coursed sandstone rubble, have plain surrounds to entrances and windows: slate roof and brick chimney stacks, early C19 sash windows with glazing bars, plank doors. Facade has terrace wall of 3 courses of 2-chamber cellar, beneath entrance hall: medieval barrel vaulting to entrance hall, with oval early C19 staircase and rib-vaulted plasterwork to ceiling and staircase arch. Medieval vaulting continues in principal room left, which has oak dado panelling and plaster ceiling of c1930 by Harrods of London, for the Carr family, fireplace has C16 re-used lintel stone found in the garden and inserted in 1982, with wood panelling above, from Eaton Hall, Cheshire, inserted at same date: remnant of internal spiral staircase with re-moulded entrance arch. Evidence on left of entrance of filled arch, now window and third storey small filled window in gable. Country retreat and grange of the Priors of St Marys, converted to country house c1690 (see Thomas Denton, Manuscript History of Cumberland) and sold by the Church Commissioners in the early 1920's. Probably by Thomas Machell, with stonework probably by Edward Addison. Pevsner (Buildings of England, Cumberland section), wrongly dates facade to c1720.

Statutory Reference: 033-1/08/10006

Grade: II

Delisted Date:

Location Address

Newbiggin Hall Farm, Carleton, Carlisle CA4 0AJ

Building Description

Farmhouse and attached outbuildings. Dated 1767 with C19 alterations and additions. Coursed squared sandstone with ashlar dressings, brick ridge chimneys with slate roof coverings. Laid to diminishing courses, and C20 corrugated sheeting.

Plan

Linear arrangement with double pile house to centre, with attached outbuildings to either end forming the north-west side of a U-shaped steading.

Front (south east) Elevation

Two storey, two bay house to centre of range, apparently re-fronted C19 in regularly coursed masonry. Central doorway with ashlar surround and lintel inscribed 'L:J:J: 1761'. Four-panel door with upper two panes glazed. Flanking the doorway at ground and first floor levels are four-pane sliding sash windows set within ashlar surrounds with moulded projecting cills. To the left, under the same roof line, a three bay stable and trap house with over-loft and grain store. Single ground floor opening to left hand end with flanking square windows and two tiers of slit breathers above. To the right of these, a pair of over-loft doorways, each with plain boarded doors, that to the left giving access to a timber boarded over loft floor, that to the right to a narrow, lime-ash floored grain store. Access to upper floor by means of a flight of stone steps with red brick supporting walls incorporating a kennel in the north-east face. Further right, former trap house doorway now in filled to form doorway with flanking window. To the right of the house, a lower three-bay barn of coursed rubble sandstone beneath a C20 corrugated sheeting roof covering. Full-height, arch headed double doorway to centre with planked doors. To left, square opening with slatted shutter; to right, lean to against north east gable with low doorway to front face.

Rear Elevation

Masonry of varied pattern, mainly coursed rubble with some snecked work suggesting part rebuilding. House extends north-westwards into rear part of outbuilding. Irregular disposition of window openings, mostly with four and six pane C19 sashes, one set at half landing level to light stair bay at the centre of the house, and with smaller first floor window to right hand bay house with chamfered surround. Small square brick stack to centre of rear wall, and low single storeyed outbuilding projecting from right hand side of house. Barn to left with three doorways, single ground floor window and two taking-in doors for former loft.

Interior

House part with large jewelled hearth surround with moulded mantle shelf to north-east ground floor room with flanking panelled cupboards to left. South-west room with smaller lugged surround with mantel shelf and flanking cupboards. Panelled doors with architrave surrounds. Stair to rear with alternating flat and stick balusters. Stable and over-lofts with single surviving stall partition, and plain tie beam roof trusses without collars. The farmhouse and attached outbuildings were the home farm to the adjacent Newbiggin Hall (item 33/42) and together with the range of outbuildings to the south-east of the farmhouse (item 33/10007) form a group.

Building Description

Country house, now Residential home, 1746 and 1913-14, later house by Alexander N Paterson of Glasgow, for John R Harrison. Rendered with buff sandstone dressings and detailing in French chateau style, under a Westmorland slate roof. Two storeys plus basement floor to south-west, farmhouse two storey. Irregular, skewed H plan, with main fronts to south-west and south-east, and link from east corner to 1746 farmhouse. South-east elevation: central single storey projecting porch with Ionic pilasters and glazed front, with door to the side that has heavily moulded surround with Latin inscription over: BEATUS ILLE OVI PROCUL NEGOTIIS PARTERNA RURA BOBUS EXERCET SUIS SOLUTUS OMNI FENORE.

To the left, two tall small-paned sash windows with Gibbs surrounds then stepped-out bay with window, then gabled wing with full height canted bay window with separate hipped roof. To the right, three similar windows, then gabled wing with link to farmhouse and external stack with exposed stone in the corner. Upper floor windows are smaller multi-paned sashes. Porch has solid stone balcony with ball finials above pilasters. Segmental broken pediment with niche above windows over porch. Rusticated quoins, drip course to first floor and moulded eaves with dentils. South-west elevation: central curved bay with three windows to first floor supported by two Ionic pillars which front an open vestibule linked to the garden by a curved double staircase with decorative wrought iron balustrading. Symmetrical layout of two windows to either side, then square bay with tri-partite windows to front and gabled above. Basement floor in snecked stone, other details as south-east front. Link at first floor level from east end of south-east front has mock-Tudor framing over an elliptical archway with thick pillars in dressed stone. Keystone has inscription of J.R.H and M.K.H, flanked by 1915 and 1684. Farmhouse, now offices, has three bay hall and one cross-wing, in rendered stone with Westmoreland slate roof, 6-over-6 horned sash windows in stone surrounds, stone kneelers and a large end stack to the cross-wing.

Interior

Entrance hall beyond entrance vestibule, entered via glazed door with semi-circular fanlight, with delicate ceiling mouldings and a wooden panelled screen with pierced and carved decoration, leading to the dining room and service rooms. Ornate fireplace with bas-relief carved classical figures in panel above. To the left are the principal rooms including drawing room with plaster work wall and ceiling panels and ornate fireplace with classical inspired surround and floral motif with painted cartouche above, library and billiard room with moulded cornices and panelled wood fire surround. To the rear of the hall, a gallery with elliptical arched ceiling and arched doorways to either side. Main staircase to rear, of wood with carved and pierced balusters in the same style as the screen below, and with pulpit-like bow at first floor landing. To right of screen, doors to service corridor, flower room, cloakroom and dining room. Dining room has deep cornices, a stone carved fireplace and wooden panel frames. All these rooms are largely unaltered in plan and original features. First floor rooms have been partially sub-divided and altered.

History

The date of 1746 for the farmhouse is on a datestone. There is no physical evidence for the 1684 date over the archway to the farmhouse, and this may refer to references to the family. The house was built in 1913 to 1914 for John R Harrison by the Glasgow architect Alexander N Paterson.

Evaluation of Importance

A large country house built in 1913-14, in Neo-Georgian style with strong vernacular influences, it survives in remarkable good and original condition with an unaltered exterior and a good level of survival of internal features of very high quality. It represents the very latest flowering of the country house tradition in England.

Conversion of barn to 1no dwelling on land South of Eden Croft, Green Lane, Crosby on Eden, CA6 4QN

Building Description

Summary of Building

Barn, later C18 of red brick with some red sandstone dressings and stone slate roof covering.

Reasons for Designation

This barn of C18 date is listed at Grade II for the following principal reasons:

- * Rarity: as a barn considered to date from the C18, it sits firmly in the period when there is a presumption that buildings that are generally intact are listed.
- * Significant original fabric: an historic pegged five-trussed roof structure and the survival of almost all original wall fabric, pierced by original door openings and ventilation slits, means that the original form of this barn is clearly illustrated.
- * Group value: the barn benefits from a spatial and functional group value with the Grade II listed Eden Croft House.

Birdoswald Farm House (or Birdoswald Tenement), Birdoswald, Gilsland, Brampton

Building Description

Revised Description: 05 March 1990

Former farmhouse, now (1988) HQ of the archaeological unit excavating the adjacent Roman site. Substantially the house built by Henry Norman in 1858, but incorporating extensive remnants of an earlier building, possibly C15 or early C16 and perhaps erected by the De Vaux family. Coursed rubble masonry, rendered on all but the rear (north) elevation; Welsh slate roofs.

Plan and Development

The building consists of principal range aligned east-west, Two rooms deep (main living rooms to the south, scullery and other service rooms to the north), entered from the south by a central porch; attached to this range to the west is a two storey tower which appears to be an almost entirely C19 construction in the form of a tower-house. A now internal dated lintel in the principal range between the service rooms and the entrance hall (AQMB1745, commemorating Anthony and Margaret Bowman) and a blocked window, strongly suggests that this range was originally only a single room in depth, and extended in 1858. The rear wall of the southeast room, and that to the west of the room and dividing it from the entrance hall and extremely thick and contain features that confirm an early date: a four-centred stone doorway arch, partially blocked but visible in the entrance hall; the remains of the newel stair in the southwest corner of the room; and an early (but undateable) window in the rear wall, first floor, and now blocked. These features together suggest the possibility that the southwest room was once a tower house, but the presence of a high quality doorway at ground level militates against this (although it is possible that the ground level may have been altered). A C19 engraving shows that there was no tower to the west before 1858. however the external stack visible on the east wall of the tower evidently pre-dates the 1858 work for its extensive corbel table survives and is visible in the roof space. (It may have served as a corbelled fireplace, but this seems unlikely in this position).

Exterior

South Elevation

Symmetrical four window range with castellated gabled porch containing datestone HN 1858 under small single-light window. Square-headed doorway with chamfered surround. Two-light windows to first floor with chamfered and vermiculated mullions and surrounds, and two pane hornless sash windows. Three light window to either side of porch, otherwise treated identically to those above. Stone coping and internal end stack (with 3 brick shafts) to east wall with one C20 window.

Rear North Elevation

of principal range with C19 fenestration; three window range, the right hand (west) windows set well to the west; eight pane hornless sash windows throughout (altered to ground floor, left). Stone plain surrounds. One doorway to left, another blocked right of centre.

Tower

Rendered, except for north elevation and battlements, the render cut back at the angles to resemble quoioning. Two stages, the upper stage slight recessed. Battlements corbelled out with external stacks to east and west. South side with one window to each floor, two lights to first floor, three to ground, with plain chamfered mullions and surrounds. West side with two, two pane hornless sash windows to first floor and a narrow slit to external stack at the same level, all with stone surrounds.

Centrally placed shield to battlements. North: two pane hornless sash window to first floor; lean to with stone coping, the door, C19 and studded.

Interior

Many early features probably remain under the plaster. Four-centred doorway, remains of newel, and old window (with wooden lintel) mentioned above. Otherwise standard C19 furnishings; one stone fireplace, C19 but in C16 style.

Roof

Standard tie, ridge-piece, side purlin roof, difficult to date but pre 1858. The corbelling in the west gable indicates an ancient well at this point, date not known (see above).

Note

The C19 owner (Henry Norman) was an antiquarian and conducted his own excavation of the adjacent Roman site. This 'tower house' (to the west) is an interesting example of 'medieval reconstruction', although it is possible that some archaeological evidence indicated the presence of a tower here, and that the surviving C16 work represents the remains of a hall range. Birdoswald Farmhouse also indicates the long established and continuous occupation of this site from Roman times.

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Abbey, formerly house. 1833-37 (date stone 1837 on building) by John Dobson for Peter Dixon, Cotton manufacturer of Warwick Bridge. Tooled red sandstone ashlar, moulded dressings, slate roof and numerous castellated stone chimney stacks and parapets. 2 storeys with towers of 3 storeys and numerous bays: Tudor-Gothic: large mansion house of basically 3 towers with connecting bays and wings surrounding a courtyard. Porch-tower has Gothic arch entrance with drip mould, large non-figurative stained glass window with squared leaded lights and coat of arms at parapet level. Windows are a mixture, some mullioned and transomed, sashes with glazing bars, diamond leaded casements and stained glass. Arched central tunnel gives access to courtyard where there were stables. Internal features include hall with freestone staircase of 3 flights supported by vaulted cantilevers with carved corbels, stone balusters with Gothic tracery and moulded stone rail: original wood panelled and plaster ceilings to every principal room: carved stone Gothic fireplaces with decorative tiles: dining room has Gothic carved wood sideboard and library has carved Gothic bookcase extending the full length of wall. Built under the supervision of James Stewart, architect of Carlisle, acting as agent, and this has previously led to some confusion. Peter Dixon had the cotton works at Warwick Bridge and in 1836 opened a large factory in Carlisle: house sold C1875 to William Watson whose trustees sold to Mr Liddell of Warwick Hall; he gave the house to nuns of the Order of St Benedict in 1921.

Building Description

Road bridge. Begun 1833, completed 1835, by Francis Giles, built by William Denton. Red sandstone ashlar. 2 piers with rounded cutwaters supporting 3 shallow segmental arches: bold string course and solid parapets: channelled joints to masonry and voussoirs. Inscription stone in both parapets records architect and builder with dates. Carries 2 lines of road traffic. A bridge of excellent architectural and engineering quality, by the architect of Corby Bridge. Replaced C16 bridge, slightly upstream, which in turn replaced a medieval bridge: on an important crossing point over the River Eden for the approach to Carlisle from the east. Pevsner, Buildings of England, wrongly ascribes the bridge to Dobson and dates it 1837.

Garden Folly. Early C18 for Thomas Howard of Corby Castle. Stone Walls, stucco, slate roof and stone chimney. In the form of a tuscan temple. Stone steps with stone piers surmounted by carved balls, lead to portico supported by 4 Tuscan columns on square bases with moulded entablature. Carving of draped figures with fish-like tails in pediment above. Gabled roof has round stone chimney stack to south gable. Entrance has moulded surround with entablature and heavily dentilled pediment: interior of portico has plain stucco walls with moulded plaster ceiling: door of 6 panels. 2 vaulted chambers beneath with 2 entrances from west, have plank doors, one with initials P.H.H. cut through it: side window above, has wooden casements with square leaded lights, but a similar window in east wall has been filled. Interior of single room, walls of painted panels of Alpine scenes by Matthew Nutter of Carlisle, 1832, and painted roundel to ceiling. Building appears on an engraving of 1729 and as Thomas Howard succeeded to the estate in 1708, it must have been built between those dates. Terminates a garden riverside walk from Corby Castle. Statutory Reference: 033-1/09/00145 Grade: I Delisted Date:

Location Address

Corby Castle, Great Corby, Carlisle, Cumbria

Building Description

Salmon coops. C12, with later repairs, for Wetheral Priory. Structure similar to that of a bridge with 3 splayed cutwater piers of dressed red sandstone and 2 abutments built into the bed and bank of the River Eden, between the east bank and Monk's Island, where the river flows in 2 channels (it is thought that the monks created the east channel especially to catch salmon, although it could be a natural feature). Between the piers and abutments are a series of wooden pans and sluice-gates, intended for catching salmon going upstream to spawn, which can be cleared by means of trap-doors above; and a cat-walk extending over the piers as a bridge. It is difficult to date any part of this structure, but it could well retain features of a C12 date: documents relating to the Priory include references to the necessary Royal licenses, requires for the strict control of such a structure. After the dissolution, the coops passed to the Howard family of Corby Castle, who still own them and use them occasionally. There is a wooden crane on the bank, which was probably intended for lifting the pens in and out of the water. Illustrated; Country Life, 7 January 1954, p.34.

Building Description

Farmhouse and barns, probably formerly row of estate cottages for Corby Castle. Mid C17; mention in previous listing to medieval masonry and timer, refers to reused material and is no indication of the date of the building. Thick coursed sandstone rubble walls, slate roof probably originally stone slates with only one chimney stack. By the arrangement of filled windows and doors this would seem to have been mullions with chamfered dressings and door lintels with chamfered points and square heads: many C19 windows and doors have been cut through the walls making it difficult to interpret the original use of the building; now one farmhouse to left and barns and hay lofts to right, still under common roof. Probably became estate farm in early C19.

Building Description

Cascade and summer house. Between 1708 and 1729 for Thomas Howard of Corby Castle. Red sandstone ashlar. Venetian summer house with cascade of 4 steps leading to oval pond, with terrace and river wall. Summer house consists of a shallow portico, with Venetian opening surmounted by carved figures of mermaids, Neptune and lion. Between central columns is a dragon's head water spout and 3 headed lions at the sides. Inside are statues of draped male and female figures. Various arched steps (one of which has a grotto behind) form cascade beneath, falling about 10 metres to the pond, which formerly has a fountain in the centre, (see Buck's engraving of Wetheral Priory, 1739) but now has statue of Nelson. At the water's edge there is a retaining wall of sandstone, repaired with brick, with steps leading through an arched opening to form a water gate. Thomas Howard wrote plays which were enacted in the cascade, see Country Life, 7 January 1954, p.34.

Building Description

Factory units, formerly wooden mill, built as cotton mill. 1790 and 1793 with extensions 1814 and 1890 for John Ferguson, Peter Dixon and William Waddell, respectively (dates and initials on combined stones, high up on the wall of the spinning mill). Squared red sandstone rubble walls, slate roof and slated bellcote. 3 storeys, plus attic and 9 bays to original mill (1790 and 1793) and spinning mill (1814) of 4 storeys, plus attic and 11 bays: straightforward factory building of the Industrial Revolution, originally water powered. Plain surrounds to windows with C19 cast iron frames and glazing bars: C20 loading bays cut through 2 windows in spinning mill and end bay covered by 4 storey projecting lift shaft. Converted to steam in 1832. Walls secured by plates and ties. Bell still in bellcote, surmounted by weather vane with initial F (Ferguson) and 1791 cut through. Internal cast-iron columns between floors. Although completed in 1791, Langthwaite Mill was gutted by fire on 8 August 1793 and had to be rebuilt: ceased production in 1883 and reopened as a woollen mill, re-named Otterburn Mill in 1888: continued as such until the late 1970's, when it was sold to be split into separate units. At its height of production, the mill employed nearly 300 people. for full details see, D J W Mawson, Langthwaite Cotton Mill, Transactions of the Cumberland and Westmorland Antiquarian & Archaeological Society, vol.1xxvi, N S, p.159-183. Listing does not include the other factory buildings nearby, except for High Buildings, originally workers cottages and included for G V.

Priory was founded c1100, but the gatehouse represents a later rebuilding, probably after the destruction of the buildings following successive border raids. Scheduled A M. Building Description

Part of wall. C14, for Benedictine Priory of Wetheral. Dressed red sandstone wall with moulded dressings. Probably originally 2 storeys but now only stands to the top of the ground floor windows; 25 metres long. Chamfered plinth course, with a probably ruined staircase at the south end. 2 lancet windows with square heads: one mullioned window of 2 lights with trefoil cusped heads. Windows and stonework match gatehouse and probably represent a total rebuilding of the Priory. No other part of the Priory stands above ground. It has been suggested that this could have been the east wall of the Chapter House: see, J H Martindale, The Priory of Wetheral, Transactions of the Cumberland & Westmorland, Antiquarian & Archaeological Society, vol.xxii, p.250.

Building Description

Carlisle City Council Listed Buildings by Parish (correct as of 14/02/2017)

Farmhouse, formerly bastle house. Late C16 or early C17. Large blocks of squared red sandstone to walls, covered with cement rendering at front, green slate roof, rendered brick chimney stacks. 2 storeys, 4 bays with single storeyed extension, built up the slope to the west, but under the same roof: not a typical bastle house. Extremely thick walls, rendered to mask alterations, make it difficult to interpret, but basically as built with C18 and C19 window openings and C19 roof. East gable to river, shows small original windows, now filled, rebuilt upper wall, gable coped with kneeler. Width increased to rear by extension with roof carried over. Doorways between rear extension and original building and between single storeyed extension, probably are original. windows and door all C20: single storey extension is whitewashed and internally the roof is carried on three trusses supported by stone corbels, one with tie beam and king post, two with cambered collar beams. Building may have been comparable with the Stonehouse in Naworth East Park. See, R C H M., Shielings & Bastles, 1970. N.B. The compass bearings given by the R C H M are wrong: for their east read north and south read east.

Building Description

Cave dwellings. Early medieval, known to have been in use in the C14, probably for the Priory of Wetheral, but popularly considered to have been used by St Constantine when a hermit. 3 chambers cut high in the cliff face above the River Eden. Masonry front wall with 3 small windows and fireplace. Access would have originally been by ladder, but now has a stone cut path. Used by the Priory of Wetheral as a place of refuge during border raids and hence the name Safe Guards. (25 metres south of the caves is a Roman inscription, referring to the 20 legion Valeria Victrix, which was mentioned in the former listing).

Eden Mount, The Green, Wetheral, CA4 8ET

Building Description

House, built in 1872 for a tea merchant, redecorated in early C20. Brick with stone quoins and carvings. Roofs of slate, that to the tower with decorative courses; metal finial. Two storeys and loft. Scattered fenestration in a variety of patterns, applied to an asymmetrical design. Victorian Gothic style. Elevation dominated by three storey tower, with facing gables over ranges to either side, that to the left smaller and half hipped. Decorative verge boards and bracketed eaves. To either side of segmental arched entrance is a bay with stylised naturalistic ornament, that to left canted that to right rectangular. Left return repeats some of these features. The right return has similar materials and finishes, but lacks any conspicuously designed features. To the rear the house sets back in two, gable ended and verge boarded wings, with flat arched openings; rectangular dormitory block projecting from the rear of these. Moulded stacks to rear slope of main roof and rear wall. Front doors and all windows of an original design.

Interior

Entrance hall with encaustic tile to stair at rear with rail of original design. Cornices to entrance hall and first floor landing, as well as several other rooms, have an Edwardian character. The room to the left, or south, of the collection of fireplaces, some with glazed, various tiles, all dating to the remodelling. Beside stair to loft is a mosaic light reflector, bearing some resemblance to mosaic work near the dining room fire. Pair of electric light fixtures to first floor stair and landing of an early C20 design. The most noteworthy decorative features are the stained glass panels found in the entrance and the room to the left and rear of the entrance hall: these contain a mixture of abstract and representational forms characteristic of early C20 work in the Arts and Crafts manner.

Building Description

Presbytery and attached stable court. 1840-41 with late C20 alterations to the service range, by A.W.N. Pugin. Of coursed square red sandstone, with ashlar sandstone dressings, rebuilt brick chimneys and a hipped roof with slate covering. Essentially square on plan, but rendered more complex by projecting elements, and stable court to east. Austere Victorian gothic style. West elevation; two storeys, two bays with steeply-pitched roof to advanced single storey porch to left side, with coped gabled and chamfered pointed doorway arch. Planked and studded door, and lancet light to side walls. Above, a two-light chamfered-mullioned window and arch headed lights and a quoined surround. Stacked three-light windows to right side. South elevation to garden of three bays with three-light windows to ground floor to left side and straight-sided four-light bay to right. Two, two-light windows above bay. North elevation of three parts. To the right, hipped gable to west front, to the left, lowered two storeyed service wing with gable to east, and to the centre, two bays each with a two-light ground floor window. To each side of these bays is a shallow single storey projecting service room. All windows formerly with undivided sash frames, some now with C20 casements. East elevation with service enclosing small yard, and further east, attached stable court now converted to form parish room and garages. Interior retains original plan and fittings including panelled doors, stick baluster stair, and two ground floor hearths with surrounds incorporating attached columns and foliated capitals supporting mantle cornice. The plans and elevation of this early Pugin presbytery form part of the Myer's collection.
